I. Executive summary and key recommendations

1. The Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on Myanmar (hereinafter “the Mission”) in its reports submitted to the Human Rights Council at its 39th session in September 2018 (hereinafter “2018 report”), established consistent patterns of serious human rights violations and abuses in Kachin, Shan and Rakhine States, in addition to serious violations of international humanitarian law between 2011 and 2018.¹ The Mission concluded that many of these violations amounted to crimes against humanity and included murder; imprisonment; enforced disappearance; torture; rape, sexual slavery and other forms of sexual violence; persecution and enslavement. In addition, in Rakhine State, the elements of the crimes against humanity of extermination and deportation were also found to be present. The violations were principally committed by the Myanmar security forces, particularly the military, or Tatmadaw. Many of the violations documented amount to the gravest crimes under international law. The Mission also concluded that “there is sufficient information to warrant the investigation and prosecution of senior officials in the Tatmadaw chain of command, so that a competent court can determine their liability for genocide in relation to the situation in Rakhine State”.²

2. The Mission found a pervasive culture of impunity at the domestic level. For that reason, it concluded that the impetus for accountability must come from the international community and it made concrete recommendations to that end. The Mission named senior generals of the Tatmadaw who should be investigated and prosecuted for genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes. Against the backdrop of the gravity of its findings, the Mission recommended that “no business enterprise active in Myanmar or trading with or investing in businesses in Myanmar should enter into an economic or financial relationship with the security forces of Myanmar, in particular the Tatmadaw, or any enterprise owned or controlled by them or their individual members, until and unless they are re-structured and transformed as recommended by the Mission”.³ The ability of the Tatmadaw to draw upon alternative sources of revenue, outside the official military budget, contributes towards it operating without civilian oversight. This recommendation from the Mission’s 2018 Report sought to ensure the Tatmadaw’s financial isolation, both to deter continued and future violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law and to promote accountability for those committed in the past, as documented by the Mission. The recommended economic isolation was also intended to encourage the transformation of the Tatmadaw that the Mission saw as essential for human rights compliance in Myanmar.

3. The Mission is issuing this report on the Tatmadaw’s economic interests to assist the Government of Myanmar, United Nations Security Council, Member States, relevant regional and international inter-governmental organizations, investors and businesses, international financial institutions, and the United Nations, its funds, programmes and agencies, in implementing these recommendations.

4. The outsize power of the Tatmadaw has affected Myanmar’s transition from full direct military dictatorship following the November 2010 and subsequent November 2015 elections. The National League for Democracy, led by Aung San Suu Kyi, won the 2015 election and took over the civilian side of the Government in March 2016. However, as prescribed by the 2008 constitution, the Tatmadaw is an autonomous institution free from any civilian control or oversight. It controls the ministries of defence, home affairs and border affairs, whose ministers are serving military officers selected by the Commander-in-Chief.⁴ It retains 25 per cent of the seats in the legislature, giving it the power to veto any constitutional change.⁵

5. The Tatmadaw's economic interests enable its conduct. The Mission investigated five areas of economic interest:

(a) the Tatmadaw's principal conglomerates, Myanmar Economic Holdings Limited (MEHL) and Myanmar Economic Corporation (MEC), the subsidiaries owned or controlled by them, the Tatmadaw's role in State-owned enterprises and the Tatmadaw's close ties with a subset of domestic private business enterprises, known as "crony companies";

(b) the Tatmadaw's economic interests in the continuing armed conflicts in Kachin and Shan States in northern Myanmar;

(c) companies and organizations that provided Tatmadaw-solicited donations in support of the military's "clearance operations" that began in August 2017 against the Rohingya in northern Rakhine, as well as businesses that have carried out infrastructure development projects in northern Rakhine State;

(d) the Tatmadaw's joint ventures and other commercial relationships with foreign companies; and

(e) companies and States selling or transferring arms and related equipment to the Tatmadaw since October 2016.

6. This report does not provide an exhaustive list of all businesses, individuals and States that provide economic benefit to the Tatmadaw and its senior generals. That was not possible in the time and with the resources available to the Mission. However, it provides an overview and a foundation upon which other investigators and researchers can continue to build. The findings described below are supported with information listed in the annexes to this report. Based on its investigations, the Mission has concluded on reasonable grounds that:

a. Two Tatmadaw conglomerates, Myanmar Economic Holdings Limited (MEHL) and Myanmar Economic Corporation (MEC), are owned and influenced by senior Tatmadaw leaders, including the Commander-in-Chief Senior General Min Aung Hlaing and the Deputy Commander-in-Chief Vice Senior General Soe Win, responsible for gross violations of international human rights law and serious violations of international humanitarian law. The Mission identified 120 MEHL and MEC owned businesses across diverse sectors of the economy – from construction and gem extraction to manufacturing, insurance, tourism and banking, and a further 27 businesses that are closely affiliated with the MEHL and MEC through corporate structures. The revenue that these military businesses generate strengthens the Tatmadaw's autonomy from elected civilian oversight and provides financial support for the Tatmadaw's operations with their wide array of international human rights and humanitarian law violations.

There are strong and persistent business and familial links between the Tatmadaw, its conglomerates MEHL and MEC, and a number of private Myanmar companies and conglomerates, colloquially known as "crony companies".

b. Human rights and international humanitarian law violations, including forced labour and sexual violence, have been perpetrated by the Tatmadaw in mining areas, particularly in Kachin State, in connection with their business activities. MEHL and MEC and 26 of their identified subsidiaries have numerous licenses for jade and ruby mining in Kachin and Shan States.

c. At least 45 companies and organizations provided the Tatmadaw with USD 10.2 million in financial donations that were solicited in September 2017 by senior Tatmadaw leadership in support of the "clearance operations" that began in August 2017 against the Rohingya in northern Rakhine. The Mission also found that private companies with enduring links to the Tatmadaw are financing development projects in northern Rakhine in furtherance of the Tatmadaw's objective of re-engineering the region in a way that erases evidence of Rohingya belonging in Myanmar, and preventing their return to access their homeland and communities. These projects, carried out under the Union Enterprise for Humanitarian Assistance, Resettlement and Development in Rakhine (UEHRD) consolidate the consequences of war crimes, crimes against humanity and acts of genocide.⁶ On the basis of these findings, the Mission has identified private companies with officials who may have made a substantial and direct contribution to the commission of crimes under international law, including the crime against humanity of “other inhumane acts” and persecution, warranting their criminal investigation.

- d. 15 foreign companies have joint ventures and at least 44 foreign companies have other forms of commercial ties with Tatmadaw businesses. Through such joint venture and commercial relationships, the Mission finds that any foreign business activity involving the Tatmadaw and its conglomerates MEHL and MEC poses a high risk of contributing to, or being linked to, violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law. At a minimum, these foreign companies are contributing to supporting the Tatmadaw’s financial capacity.
- e. At least 14 foreign companies from seven States have provided arms and related equipment to the Tatmadaw since 2016, after the Tatmadaw’s dismal human rights record was widely and publicly known. Moreover, the public record made it clear that the Tatmadaw used many of the types of arms and related equipment that these entities were providing to commit gross violations of human rights and serious violations of international humanitarian law. Many of these companies and States therefore knew, or ought to have known, that their arms transfers could have a direct and reasonably foreseeable impact on the human rights situation in Myanmar. Among the arms suppliers identified by the Mission, 12 companies are State-owned enterprises.

The Mission also received credible information regarding seven foreign private companies from which the Tatmadaw sought to procure dual-use goods and technology since 2016. The technology includes telecommunications services, tracking and precision systems, unmanned aerial vehicles, and internet and data transmission technology.⁷

7. To eliminate these alternative sources of revenue and economic interests, the government of Myanmar must start by placing the Tatmadaw fully under civilian control and oversight through the adoption of necessary laws and policies, including through the amendment of the Constitution. Until then, the United Nations Security Council, Member States, relevant regional and international inter-governmental organizations should impose targeted financial sanctions against all Tatmadaw-owned companies, especially MEHL, MEC and their subsidiaries, and do so in a manner that respects human rights and gives due consideration to any negative socio-economic impact of such sanctions on the civilian population. This should be accompanied by a comprehensive arms embargo on Myanmar, with a monitoring and enforcement mechanism.

8. The Mission reiterates its recommendation from its 2018 report that “targeted individual sanctions, including travel bans and asset freezes, could support a reduction in violations of international law, particularly acts amounting to gross human rights violations and serious crimes under international law”.⁸ The findings in this report provide a clear pathway forward for the Government of Myanmar, United Nations Security Council, Member States, relevant regional and international inter-governmental organizations, investors and businesses, international financial institutions, and the United Nations, its funds, programmes and agencies to implement this recommendation. This report also indicates areas that deserve greater attention, recalling that investigations leading to the tracing, freezing, seizure and recovery of assets linked to persons responsible for crimes under international law is a critical component in the pursuit of accountability. It is also critical for Member States to exercise jurisdiction to investigate and, if appropriate, prosecute officials of companies who allegedly participated in the commission of serious crimes under international law committed in relation to Myanmar’s human rights crisis.

9. No business enterprise active in Myanmar or trading with or investing in businesses in Myanmar should enter into a business relationship of any kind with the security forces of Myanmar, in particular the Tatmadaw, or any enterprise owned or controlled by them, including subsidiaries, or their individual members. Given the global reach of Myanmar's jade and ruby trade, the involvement of the Tatmadaw in its extraction and the Tatmadaw's responsibility for human rights and international humanitarian law violations perpetrated in mining areas, businesses should ensure they are not contributing towards, or benefiting from, those violations. In parallel, investment in the private sector, whether by private businesses or international financial institutions, should prioritize supporting the growth of alternative economic actors to the Tatmadaw and associated businesses.

II. Mandate, methodology, and international legal and policy framework

A. Mandate

10. Human Rights Council resolution 34/22 (2017) mandated the Mission "to establish the facts and circumstances of the alleged recent human rights violations by military and security forces, and abuses, in Myanmar, in particular in Rakhine State, including but not limited to arbitrary detention, torture and inhuman treatment, rape and other forms of sexual violence, extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary killings, enforced disappearances, forced displacement, deportation and unlawful destruction of property, with a view to ensuring full accountability for perpetrators and justice for victims". Resolution 39/2 (2018) extended the Mission's mandate and gave it the additional responsibility of ensuring it had fully documented, verified, consolidated and preserved the evidence collected in order for the material to be effectively shared, accessed and used by the Independent Investigative Mechanism for Myanmar.

11. In its 2018 report the Mission concluded on reasonable grounds that the Tatmadaw has been directly involved in gross violations of human rights law and serious violations of international humanitarian law, including acts of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes, in Myanmar. The Mission is now fulfilling its mandate further by investigating how the Tatmadaw's economic interests enable the Tatmadaw to perpetrate violations of international human rights and humanitarian law and how businesses are reaping the benefits of the Tatmadaw's unlawful activities. It is clear to the Mission that the Tatmadaw's ability to draw upon alternative sources of revenue, outside the official military budget, enables it to operate without effective oversight from the civilian side of the Government or through the Parliament. The Tatmadaw's financial isolation would help deter continuing and future international human rights and international humanitarian law violations, contribute towards accountability for those committed in the past, and encourage the transformation of the Tatmadaw and end its political and economic supremacy in Myanmar.

12. In fulfilling its mandate to ensure "full accountability for perpetrators and justice for victims", the Mission also applied rules and principles of international law that prohibit foreign States from contributing to violations of international human rights and humanitarian law. These are prohibitions that, when not adhered to, enable the Tatmadaw to perpetrate the types of violations that the Mission documented in Rakhine, Kachin and Shan States. The Mission looked specifically at the transfer of arms and related equipment from foreign States to the Tatmadaw following the wide condemnation of the Tatmadaw's conduct in northern Rakhine in October 2016. The Mission's findings from this investigation provide the international community with a more complete understanding of Myanmar's human rights crisis. This understanding should compel the international community, specifically the United Nations Security Council, regional and intergovernmental organizations, and individual States to make arms transfer sanctions an integral part of a coordinated multilateral approach to accountability, justice and ending the human rights crisis in Myanmar.

B. Methodology

13. In preparing this report, the Mission again followed established methodologies and best practices for human rights fact-finding, as developed by the United Nations. In doing so, the Mission adhered to the principles of “do no harm”, independence, impartiality, objectivity, transparency and integrity. The findings contained in this report are also based on methodologies for investigation and protection of victims and witnesses, consistent with previous Mission reports.⁹

14. Given the thematic investigation focus of this report, the Mission considered the following sources of information:

- a. statistics, surveys and other quantitative information, to the extent that the information was based on sound methodology and originated from credible and reliable sources;
- b. corporate records, including through Myanmar government company registration,¹⁰ open source¹¹ and private-subscription¹² databases that list the ownership and/or senior management of privately-held companies;
- c. annual reports by the Myanmar Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative with respect to the extractive sector (oil, gas, copper, coal, gems and timber);
- d. other documents containing first-hand information from credible and reliable sources, as well as credible and reliable literature documenting Myanmar’s conflict resource economy, demonstrating how natural resource extraction and production sectors directly and indirectly generate revenue for the Tatmadaw and finance, directly or indirectly, their leaders and military activities;
- e. confidential interviews conducted by the Mission with subject-matter experts with first-hand knowledge of Tatmadaw business practices and structures, provided that the Mission assessed the source and/or the content to be credible and reliable;
- f. information contained in expert interviews, public reports, media accounts, submissions and academic research publications, where the Mission assessed the source and/or the content to be credible and reliable;
- g. credible and reliable satellite imagery and analysis;
- h. publicly available admissions of relevant facts by Myanmar and foreign officials;
- i. laws, policies and directives of Myanmar and internal government documents, provided that they were received from credible and reliable sources and their authenticity was not in doubt.

15. The Mission shared this report with the Government of Myanmar on 31 July with a view to soliciting information about any factual inaccuracies, by 4 August. No response was received at the time of publication. The Missions also sought where possible information from other governments and businesses referred to in the report, to which it received several replies.

16. During the Mission’s investigation for this report, the Mission received numerous allegations of companies collaborating directly with ethnic armed organizations in northern Myanmar in the exploitation of natural resources.¹³ These are natural resources that fund and

¹³ As in A/HRC/39/CRP.2, this report uses the term “ethnic armed organization” when referring to non-State armed groups operating in northern Myanmar (Kachin and Shan States) in opposition to the Government. The term “non-State armed group” ordinarily refers to such organizations, as well as fuel hostilities in Kachin and Shan States.¹⁴ While such conduct may implicate the companies as well as the ethnic armed organizations and raise serious human rights concerns, the Mission has decided to focus its research on Tatmadaw economic interests as its focus here is giving substance to the recommendations in its 2018 report.

17. Given the pervasive lack of transparency surrounding economic activity in Myanmar, especially where the Tatmadaw is involved, the Mission is well aware that its research does not provide a complete picture of the breadth and extent of all of the Tatmadaw's economic interests. The Mission strongly encourages additional research and investigations to fill these important gaps, some of which are identified in the recommendations of this report.¹⁵ Nonetheless, the Mission is confident that the information in this report meets the "reasonable grounds to conclude" level of corroboration unless stated otherwise. The information gathered by the Mission in the course of this investigation has been preserved with a view to being shared with competent and credible bodies pursuing accountability in line with recognized international norms and standards, including with regard to due process and fair trial standards.¹⁶

18. In its investigations and research the Mission received information from a number of sources under considerable risk of reprisals. The Mission has taken a number of measures to protect these sources, including by preserving the confidentiality of their interaction with the Mission. The Mission extends its gratitude to these individuals and appeals for their safety and security.

C. International legal and policy framework

19. The facts documented in this report were assessed in light of rules applicable to States under international human rights law, international humanitarian law, international rules on arms sales and transfers, and general rules of State responsibility.¹⁷ The report has also assessed the facts in light of international principles that business should adhere to and modes of liability for business actors under international criminal law.

1. State obligations

(a) International human rights law applicable to Myanmar

20. International human rights law obligates States to respect and protect the human rights of people in their territory or under their jurisdiction. This obligation requires that State actors, including military officials, not violate human rights. It also includes ensuring the activities of companies do not result in human rights abuses. The obligation is to ensure these human rights protections apply to civil and political rights and economic, social and cultural rights.¹⁸ In recognition of this, Human Rights Council resolution 40/L.19 (2019) on Myanmar called upon the Government of Myanmar to "demilitarize mining regions and to ensure the protection of human rights for workers in natural resource extraction and the enforcement of other armed actors operating in these and other States (eg. militia groups, or the Arakan Rohingya Salvation Army, known as ARSA, in Rakhine State).

¹⁸ International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, Article 2 as well as 3, 18, and 23; International Covenant on Economic Social and Cultural Rights, Articles 2, as well as 3, 7, 8, 11, and 13. Although Myanmar is not party to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, much of its content is found in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR). The UDHR was not intended at the time to be a legally binding document, but it is now generally considered as an authoritative interpretation of the human rights provisions in the (binding) United Nations Charter. The UDHR is considered a "common standard of achievement for all peoples and all nations" and it sets out the fundamental human rights that are to be universally protected. It is accepted that many of its provisions – if not the entire document – are reflective of customary international law. See A/HRC/39/CRP.2, paragraphs 41-43.

environmental safety standards". The resolution also urged the Government to develop inclusive policies for natural resource management and benefit sharing through including relevant stakeholders and affected populations.¹⁹ The UN Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Myanmar has noted that Myanmar, as a party to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, should refrain from entering into trade and investment treaties where the Government's actions in relation to fulfilling an investment agreement would lead to human rights abuses, such as forced relocation and inadequate resettlement.²⁰ The obligations of States to respect and protect economic, social and cultural rights that are most relevant to the acts of the Tatmadaw documented in this report include the prohibition on forced labour²¹ and arbitrary or unlawful deprivation of wages.²²

21. In further elaboration of the obligations that human rights law places on States to regulate companies, the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights: Implementing the United Nations "Protect, Respect and Remedy" Framework (Guiding Principles) instruct States to "protect against human rights abuse within their territory and/or jurisdiction by third parties, including business enterprises. This requires taking appropriate steps to prevent, investigate, punish and redress such abuse through effective policies, legislation, regulations and adjudication."²³ States should also "set out clearly the expectation that all business enterprises domiciled in their territory and/or jurisdiction respect human rights throughout their operations".²⁴ The Guiding Principles should be implemented in a non-discriminatory manner, with particular attention to the rights and needs of groups that may be at heightened risk of becoming vulnerable or marginalized, and with due regard to gender-based risks.²⁵

22. In meeting their duty to protect human rights, the Guiding Principles explain further that States should, inter alia: enforce laws that are aimed at, or have the effect of, requiring business enterprises to respect human rights, and periodically assess the adequacy of such laws and address any gaps; provide effective guidance to business enterprises on how to respect human rights throughout their operations; and encourage and, where appropriate, require business enterprises to communicate how they address their human rights impacts.²⁶

23. The Guiding Principles call on States to take additional measures to protect against human rights abuses by their own State-owned or controlled enterprises or those that receive substantial support and services from State agencies, such as requiring human rights due diligence.²⁷ When they contract with, or legislate for, business enterprises to provide services that may impact upon the enjoyment of human rights, the Guiding Principles call on States to exercise adequate oversight in order to meet their international human rights obligations.²⁸

24. In recognition of the heightened risk of human rights abuses occurring in the context of conflict areas, the Guiding Principles emphasise that States should "help ensure that business enterprises operating in those contexts are not involved with such abuses". The Guiding Principles provide several measures for doing this, including: "(a) Engaging at the earliest stage possible with business enterprises to help them identify, prevent and mitigate the human rights-related risks of their activities and business relationships; (b) Providing adequate assistance to business enterprises to assess and address the heightened risks of abuses, paying special attention to both gender-based and sexual violence; (c) Denying access to public support and services for a business enterprise that is involved with gross human rights abuses and refuses to cooperate in addressing the situation; (d) Ensuring that their current policies, legislation, regulations and enforcement measures are effective in addressing the risk of business involvement in gross human rights abuses”.²⁹

25. In addition to respecting and protecting human rights, States must ensure that any person whose rights or freedoms are violated through the activities of businesses has an effective remedy; States must also ensure that any person claiming such a remedy will have their right to a remedy determined by competent judicial, administrative or legislative authorities, or by any other competent authority provided for by the legal system of the State; and access to such remedies must exist notwithstanding that the violation has been committed by persons acting in an official capacity.³⁰ The right to a remedy is non-derogable.³¹ It is also a rule of customary international law.³²

26. States have a specific duty to investigate and, if there is sufficient evidence, prosecute gross violations of international human rights law and serious violations of international humanitarian law, in particular those that amount to crimes under international law (in particular war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide).³³ Investigations into allegations must always be independent, impartial, prompt, thorough, effective, credible and transparent.³⁴ In addition, accountability encompasses measures to realize the right to know the truth, the right to reparation and guarantees of non-recurrence.³⁵ Reparation can be in the form of restitution, compensation, rehabilitation, satisfaction and guarantee of non-repetition. To ensure non-repetition, the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights has determined that an effective remedy may require improvements to legislation and policies proven ineffective in preventing the abuses.³⁶

(b) International human rights law applicable to foreign States

27. International human rights law also places certain obligations on States to regulate the behaviour of businesses that operate in their territory or under their jurisdiction in relation to any adverse impact that they have or may have on the human rights of people outside their territory.³⁷ This is particularly relevant to States with businesses that have transferred arms to the Tatmadaw and States from which businesses have relations with the Tatmadaw, directly or indirectly, through joint ventures and commercial partnerships. In fulfilling these obligations, State Parties to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights must take appropriate legislative and other measures to ensure that all activities taking place in whole or in part within their territory or under their jurisdiction, and having a direct and reasonably foreseeable impact on the right to life of individuals outside their territory, are consistent with the right to life and of the right of victims to obtain an effective remedy.³⁸ This also holds true for other civil and political rights,³⁹ as well as economic, social and cultural rights.⁴⁰

28. In recognition of the significant increase of activities of transnational corporations, growing investment and trade flows between countries, and the emergence of global supply chains, in 2017 the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights provided authoritative guidance clarifying that States' obligations under the Covenant "did not stop at their territorial borders".⁴¹ States Parties are "required to take the steps necessary to prevent human rights violations abroad by business enterprises domiciled in their territory and/or jurisdiction". The Committee explained that extraterritorial obligations arise when a State "may influence situations located outside its territory, consistent with the limits imposed by international law, by controlling the activities of corporations domiciled in its territory and/or under its jurisdiction, and thus may contribute to the effective enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights outside its national territory".⁴² For these reasons, the Guiding Principles similarly apply to States with businesses domiciled in their territory or under their jurisdiction when the activities of those businesses may impact the human rights of people in Myanmar. UN Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Myanmar urged home countries of foreign companies investing and/or operating in Myanmar to ensure they act in line with the Guiding Principles. The Special Rapporteur noted, "It is paramount that international financial institutions, development agencies, States and private investors consider conformity with these standards at all levels prior to implementing projects".⁴³

(c) International humanitarian law

29. International humanitarian law regulates armed conflict.⁴⁴ Common Article 1 to the four Geneva Conventions, to which Myanmar is a party, places a standing obligation on States to "ensure respect" for the Conventions' protections in all circumstances. This is particularly relevant to the Mission's investigation into arms transfers. The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) in its authoritative commentary to Common Article 1, explains that the Article 1 obligation requires, inter alia, that States "refrain from transferring weapons if there is an expectation, based on facts or knowledge of past patterns, that the weapons would be used to violate the Conventions”.⁴⁵ It has been credibly argued that, once a State knows that the receiving State systematically commits violations of humanitarian law with certain weapons, continuing assistance is necessarily given with a view to facilitating further violations.⁴⁶ While the rules of international humanitarian law generally apply only to situations of armed conflict, Common Article 1 does not have this restriction. As the ICRC explains in its commentary, “The obligation to respect and to ensure respect for the Conventions is not limited...to armed conflict, but applies equally in peacetime”. This is an obligation that applies as a matter of treaty law and customary international law to all the arms contributing countries listed in this report.⁴⁷

(d) Arms trade law

30. The Arms Trade Treaty (ATT), which entered into force in December 2014, also provides important rules relevant to the Mission’s findings. The ATT was adopted by the General Assembly to regulate the international trade in conventional arms. Its stated object and purpose explicitly include establishing the highest possible common international standards for regulating or improving the regulation of the international trade in conventional arms for the purpose of reducing human suffering.⁴⁸ One of its guiding principles is to respect and ensure respect for human rights and international humanitarian law.⁴⁹

31. Article 6 prohibits a State Party from authorizing the transfer of conventional arms if it has knowledge at the time of authorization that the arms or items would be used in the commission of genocide, crimes against humanity, grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions of 1949, attacks directed against civilian objects or civilians protected as such, or other war crimes as defined by international agreements to which it is a party. The ATT covers the following conventional weapons: battle tanks; armoured combat vehicles; large-calibre artillery systems; combat aircraft; attack helicopters; warships; missiles and missile launchers; and small arms and light weapons. Article 6 also applies to transfers of ammunition/munitions fired, launched or delivered by the conventional arms listed by the ATT⁵⁰ as well as parts and components where the item is in a form that provides the capability to assemble the conventional arms that the ATT lists.⁵¹

32. Where transfer is not prohibited under Article 6, Article 7 of the ATT places a due diligence obligation on exporting States Parties to assess, inter alia, the potential that the arms or other items would contribute to undermining peace and security, or could be used to commit or facilitate a serious violation of international humanitarian law or of international human rights law. The exporting State Party must also consider whether there are measures that could be undertaken to mitigate those risks and it must not authorize the export if there is an overriding risk of any of those negative consequences occurring. The exporting State’s assessment must also take into account the risk of the items being used to commit or facilitate serious acts of gender-based violence or serious acts of violence against women and children.

33. Currently there are 104 States Parties to the ATT.⁵² While none of the States identified by the Mission as transferring arms or related items to the Tatmadaw is a party to the ATT, some of them – Ukraine, the Philippines and Israel – have signed the treaty.⁵³ Singapore, which requires further investigation into its actions, is also a signatory. As signatories, each of these States has an obligation to “refrain from acts which would defeat the object and purpose” of the Arms Trade Treaty, unless it has made its intention clear not to become a party to the treaty.⁵⁴ Given the ATT’s stated object and purpose of establishing the highest possible common international standards for regulating or improving the regulation of the international trade in conventional arms for the purpose of reducing human suffering, the Mission regards acts contrary to Articles 6 and 7 as defeating the treaty’s object and purpose, and so a violation of international law by a signatory State.⁵⁵

(e) Other-export control standards

34. The Mission’s legal analysis is also informed by the EU common position controlling the export of military technology and equipment,⁵⁶ which imposes strict obligations on European Union countries to apply existing sanctions and arms embargoes, as well as deny export licenses where there is a clear risk that the military technology or equipment to be exported might be used for internal repression, defined as including, inter alia, torture and other cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment, summary or arbitrary executions, disappearances, arbitrary detentions and other major violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms as set out in relevant international human rights instruments, including the Universal Declaration on Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.⁵⁷ Moreover, the EU common position makes clear that where there are serious grounds for believing that the end-user of dual-use goods and technology will be the armed forces or internal security forces or similar entities in the recipient country, such goods are considered, for the purposes of export control, military technology or equipment.⁵⁸

35. For countries exporting technology and equipment to the Tatmadaw that are not European Union members, the Mission was informed by the non-binding Wassenaar Arrangement on Export Controls for Conventional Arms and Dual-Use Goods and Technologies. The Arrangement has 42 State participants and is intended to reduce threats to

⁵⁵ Article 1 of the ATT sets out its object and purpose. Its object is to “establish the highest possible common international standards for regulating or improving the regulation of the international trade in conventional arms” and to “prevent and eradicate the illicit trade in conventional arms and prevent their diversion.” “Reducing human suffering” is one of the ATT’s fundamental purposes. The others are to contribute to international and regional peace, security and stability, and to promote “cooperation, transparency and responsible action by States Parties in the international trade in conventional arms, thereby building confidence among States Parties”. The implementation of the treaty’s arms transfer criteria, set out in Articles 6 and 7, is therefore particularly relevant to the ATT’s object and purpose. regional and international security. The Wassenaar Arrangement promotes “transparency and greater responsibility in transfers of conventional arms and dual-use goods and technologies” and, to that end, maintains a list of dual-use goods and technologies, to which States are expected to apply export controls.⁵⁹

(f) General rules of State responsibility

36. Under general rules of State responsibility and customary rules of international law a State is prohibited from aiding or assisting another State in the commission of an internationally wrongful act where three conditions are fulfilled: that the State organ or agency providing aid or assistance is aware of the circumstances making the conduct of the assisted State internationally wrongful; that the aid or assistance be given with a view to facilitating the commission of that act and actually does so; and that the completed act be such that it would have been wrongful had it been committed by the assisting State itself.⁶⁰ A detailed study of this rule determined that the test for aiding and assisting is whether the assisting State knew, or was virtually certain, that the assistance would be used for unlawful purposes.⁶¹ Aid or assistance is generally accepted as covering a broad range of activity and is not limited to acts of particular gravity.⁶² It may include not only the provision of material aid, such as weapons, but also logistical and technical assistance and financial support, such as export credit guarantees.⁶³ Additionally, when a State engages in gross and/or systematic breaches of peremptory norms of general international law, other States must not render aid or assistance in maintaining the situation (even if the breach has ceased) and must cooperate to end, through lawful means, such “serious breaches”.⁶⁴ Peremptory norms of general international law include crimes against humanity, torture, genocide, racial discrimination and apartheid, and slavery.⁶⁵

2. Responsible business policies and practices

37. Domestic and foreign companies engaging with the Tatmadaw should apply relevant international human rights principles and safeguards as a matter of the corporate responsibility to respect human rights. A foundational principle of the Guiding Principles is that business enterprises should respect human rights by avoiding causing or contributing to adverse human rights impacts, addressing those impacts when they occur, and seeking to prevent or mitigate those impacts that are directly linked to their business relationships, even if they have not contributed to those impacts.⁶⁶ The Guiding Principles instruct businesses to meet these responsibilities through policy commitments, due diligence and remediation for adverse human rights impacts they cause or contribute to.⁶⁷

38. Industry-specific guidance has been developed to implement the Guiding Principles. The European Commission guidance on implementing the Guiding Principles in the information and communications technology sector highlights the importance of human rights due diligence, particularly in high-risk contexts characterized by active or latent conflict, systematic disregard for human rights in law or in practice and pervasive corruption.⁶⁸ The guidance specifically addresses companies providing telecommunications services, web or cloud-based platforms, devices, components and software. It gives examples of how due diligence processes can lead to companies declining sales to “at risk” countries.⁶⁹

39. The Human Rights Council confirmed the importance of applying the Guiding Principles in Myanmar in resolution 40/L.19 (2019), which encouraged “all business enterprises, including transnational corporations and domestic enterprises, to respect human rights in accordance with the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights”.

40. The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) also emphasizes the importance of businesses putting in place policies and procedures that, on a continuing basis, proactively and reactively, ensure businesses do not contribute to human rights violations and other risks in countries such as Myanmar.⁷⁰ This is especially relevant for Myanmar’s extractive industries, particularly the jade and ruby mining industry. The OECD Due Diligence Guidance for Responsible Supply Chains of Minerals from Conflict-Affected and High-Risk Areas (Due Diligence Guidance) provides a five point due diligence framework that urges companies to establish strong company management systems that can implement and communicate due diligence policies and procedures; identify and assess risk in the supply chain; design and implement a strategy to respond to identified risks; carry out independent third-party audit of supply chain due diligence at identified points in the supply chain; and publicly report on supply chain due diligence.⁷¹ The Due Diligence Guidance recommends specifically that businesses evaluate whether there are any forms of torture or cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment imposed for the purposes of mineral extraction; any forms of forced or compulsory labour; child labour; other gross human rights violations and abuses, such as widespread sexual violence on mine sites or in the course of mineral extraction; war crimes or other serious violations of international humanitarian law, crimes against humanity or genocide.⁷² In a different context, the UN Security Council confirmed the importance of due diligence when it endorsed recommendations designed to be consistent with the OECD Due Diligence Guidance.⁷³

41. The OECD has also articulated international standards in its Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises, which include a set of recommendations from OECD Member States to multinational enterprises operating in or from those States.⁷⁴ These recommendations specifically address “all the entities within the multinational enterprise (parent companies and/or local entities)”⁷⁵ and, according to their commentaries, extend to the entire enterprise group, prescribing clear lines of accountability throughout any corporate structure.⁷⁶ These standards are relevant for foreign companies that have entered into joint ventures or other business relationships with the Tatmadaw’s holding companies and subsidiaries, including through their own subsidiaries based in Myanmar.

42. The principles on which the United Nations Global Compact (Global Compact) operate also assume the responsibility of a parent company for its subsidiaries.⁷⁷ The Global Compact, similar to the Guiding Principles, also provides businesses world-wide with a framework of shared values through ten principles that include respecting human rights and avoiding complicity in human rights abuses. The first principle is that businesses should “support and respect the protection of internationally proclaimed human rights”. The second principle is to “make sure that they are not complicit in human right abuses”. Complicity arises when a business helps another business or organisation carry out a human rights abuse with the knowledge that its act or omission could provide such help.⁷⁸ This ‘help’ can include assistance, facilitation, legitimization or encouragement, including acts or omissions by companies (or their representatives).⁷⁹

3. Business officials and criminal liability

43. International law also permits States to hold company officials criminally liable for their direct acts or omissions and for involvement with others in crimes under international law, if they aid, abet or otherwise assist in genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes.⁸⁰ It is particularly relevant to the situation in Myanmar that these modes of criminal liability can arise when business officials engage in acts or omissions that assist, encourage or lend moral support to the perpetration of a crime.⁸¹ This can include financial assistance and the provision of goods, information and services, including banking and communications services.⁸² If businesses rely on the services or resources of the States or encourage the State to provide it with services and resources, with the knowledge that these services might result in crimes under international law, the relevant business officials risk criminal liability.⁸³

44. Under the rules of aiding and abetting, the Special Court for Sierra Leone (SCSL) found that a perpetrator must have provided substantial assistance to the commission of a crime, must have had knowledge that the contribution would assist the commission of the crime, or at least have had awareness as to the substantial likelihood that the contribution would render assistance, and was aware of the crime's "essential elements", including the state of mind of the principal offender.⁸⁴ The International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) has held that the assistance must be specifically directed at a crime⁸⁵ but the accused does not need to know the exact crime that was intended and committed. It is not necessary that the person allegedly aiding and abetting knows the precise crime that was intended and that was committed but the person must be aware of the essential elements of the crime committed by the principal offender, including the principal offender's state of mind.⁸⁶ However, the aider and abettor does not need to share the intent of the principal offender⁸⁷ nor do they even need to know who is committing the crime.⁸⁸ The tribunal determined that, if the accused was "aware that one of a number of crimes will probably be committed, and one of those crimes is in fact committed, [the accused] has intended to facilitate the commission of that crime, and is guilty as an aider and abettor".⁸⁹ Activities that amount to a substantial contribution to the crime have been found by a number of international criminal courts to include allowing resources one is in control of and responsible for to be used by the principal perpetrators in the commission of the crime. 45. States are obliged to investigate and, if there is sufficient evidence, prosecute acts amounting to genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes.⁹¹ This obligation extends to acts and omissions by corporate officials that aid, abet or otherwise assist in the commission of those crimes. To this end, the Mission notes that on this basis several domestic legal systems have sought to punish corporate actors under their domestic criminal and civil law.⁹²

III. Mapping Tatmadaw economic structures and interests

46. The Mission’s mapping of the Tatmadaw’s conglomerates, its interests in State-owned enterprises and its relationships with private companies has been guided by the Mission’s interest in the sources of Tatmadaw off-budget revenue that allow it to evade democratic, civilian control of the military and serve to protect the Tatmadaw from accountability for grave crimes under international law.⁹³

47. In addition to the information on the Tatmadaw’s business structures and interests outlined below, the Mission received information regarding 34 other businesses apparently owned directly by the Tatmadaw. The Mission was not able to verify this information, and so has not included it in this report. However, the Mission has preserved it to assist in future investigations.⁹⁴

A. Tatmadaw holding companies MEHL and MEC

48. The Tatmadaw owns and operates two major holding companies – Myanmar Economic Holding Limited (MEHL) and Myanmar Economic Corporation (MEC). The Mission has evidence that MEHL and MEC and their subsidiaries generate revenue that dwarfs that of any civilian-owned company⁹⁵ in Myanmar.⁹⁶ Significantly each of the holding companies owns a large bank.⁹⁷

49. Through its investigation, the Mission has identified 120 businesses that it concluded on reasonable grounds are owned by MEHL and MEC, and a further 27 businesses that it

concluded on reasonable grounds closely affiliated with the MEHL and MEC through corporate structures.⁹⁸

1. Background

50. Myanmar Economic Holding Limited (MEHL), formerly known as the Union of Myanmar Economic Holding Limited (UMEHL), was the first private company established in Myanmar following the 1988 military coup, during the rule of the military junta, first known as the State Law and Order Restoration Council (SLORC) and later the State Peace and Development Council (SPDC). MEHL has at least four declared objectives: the welfare of military personnel and their dependents, the welfare of war veterans and their dependents,⁹⁹ the welfare of the general public, and contributing to the economic development of Myanmar.¹⁰⁰ Since its establishment, MEHL has also served to secure control and generate profit for the Tatmadaw and its senior leadership.¹⁰¹ Today, MEHL is a holding company with businesses in various industries, including gem production, banking, tourism and transport.¹⁰² MEHL owns the Myawaddy Bank.¹⁰³

51. Myanmar Economic Corporation (MEC) was established in 1997, with the declared objectives of contributing to Myanmar's economy, fulfilling the needs of the Tatmadaw, reducing defence spending and ensuring the welfare of military personnel.¹⁰⁴ Today, MEC is a holding company with businesses in the mining, manufacturing, and telecommunications sectors, as well as companies that supply natural resources to the Tatmadaw,¹⁰⁵ and operate factories producing goods for use by the Tatmadaw.¹⁰⁶ The MEC owns the Innwa Bank.¹⁰⁷

2. Governance

52. Current and former high-ranking Tatmadaw officials, including those accused of some of the gravest crimes under international law, have apparent significant control and influence over the two holding companies and therefore over their subsidiaries.¹⁰⁸ The corporate structure of both MEHL and MEC is highly opaque, however, the Mission was able to identify the composition of MEHL's Patron Group. Commander-in-Chief Senior General Min Aung Hlaing and Deputy Commander-in-Chief Vice Senior General Soe Win lead the Patron Group of the MEHL.¹⁰⁹ The Mission has named both as being responsible for crimes under international law¹¹⁰ and the United States has sanctioned both individuals due to their involvement in gross violations of human rights.¹¹¹ Commander of the 15th Light Infantry Division, General Khin Maung Soe, who is subject to the sanctions regimes of the European Union, United States, United Kingdom and Australia, serves as a MEC director.¹¹²

53. While MEHL and MEC are not State-owned enterprises under Myanmar's Economic Enterprise Law,¹¹³ all shares in MEHL are held and managed by current or former military officers.¹¹⁴ MEHL is a public limited company and MEC is a private limited company that is registered as a public holding company. This makes MEHL marginally more accountable than MEC, which operates in secrecy and is only accountable to the highest level of the Tatmadaw. Neither entity has made its financial or annual reports available publicly, despite Myanmar's new Companies Law, which entered into force on 1 August 2018 and requires the registration of all companies and submission of corporate reporting through the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration (DICA).¹¹⁵

54. Although little is known about MEHL's corporate governance, the company's Patron Group includes seven of the most senior members of the Tatmadaw. The Commander-in-Chief is the Chairman and the Deputy Commander-in-Chief (who is also the Commander in Chief of the Army) serves as the Vice Chairman. The Adjutant General is the Committee's Secretary. Its membership also includes the Joint Chief of Staff and the commanders-in-chief of the Navy and Air Force, as well as the Quartermaster General.¹¹⁶ Additionally, MEHL has an eleven-person Board of Directors, of which seven are serving military officers and four are veterans. The Board of Directors is chaired by the Adjutant General and managed by the Director for Military Procurement. The Board also includes the Chiefs of Staff of the Army,

Navy and Air Force, as well as the Inspector General and Judge Advocate General. Four representatives of the Myanmar War Veteran's Organization also sit on the board.¹¹⁷

55. MEC is reportedly fully owned and controlled by the Ministry of Defence and, as such, is a direct source of revenue for the military.¹¹⁸ According to reports, MEC is controlled by the Tatmadaw's Quartermaster General's Office. MEC also has a wholly owned private subsidiary, Myanmar Economic Corporation Limited (MEC Ltd). The Board of MEC Ltd is reported to include the Chiefs of Staff of the Army, Navy and Air Force, the Defence Permanent Secretary and the Directors of the Directorates of Supply and Transport, Signals, and Electrical and Mechanical Engineers.¹¹⁹ MEC Ltd is reported to be audited, whereas MEC is not.¹²⁰ There is no indication that either MEC or MEC Ltd produce financial reports, as neither has made any financial or annual reporting available publicly through DICA.¹²¹ This makes it difficult to track financial flows between MEC and its subsidiaries, as well as sources of MEC revenues and where such revenue is spent.

3. Revenue

56. Information about the revenues of MEHL and MEC is scarce. Both holding companies were exempt from income and commercial tax between 1998 and 2011. To date they have never made their financial reports available to the public.¹²² Much of the funds generated through MEC and MEHL bypasses formal government channels, with indications that billions of USD in government revenue from the oil and gas, copper, jade, rubies, amber and forestry sectors remain unaccounted for.¹²³ In the jade sector, in which MEHL and MEC are major players, investigations and analyses have found that jade worth tens of billions of USD is smuggled each year into China, while only a small fraction of jade is officially sold through the government-run Myanmar Gems Emporium and taxed.¹²⁴

57. Tatmadaw-owned resource companies and government revenue collecting agencies publicly disagree on the amounts of tax paid by MEHL and MEC and their subsidiaries.¹²⁵ For MEC, the discrepancy between what the company reported paying and what the

This is despite MEHL's transition into a public company in 2016 and Myanmar's new Companies Law, which requires the registration of all companies and submission of corporate reporting to DICA. See paragraph 52 of this report.

government reported receiving amounted to Ks 9.8 billion (approximately 6.4 million USD), equating to two per cent of all extractive industry revenues collected nationwide each year.¹²⁶

58. According to Deputy Defence Minister Major General Myint Nwe, the MEHL conglomerate was valued at Ks 161 billion (USD 119.4 million) in 2017.¹²⁷ While it is difficult to verify this estimate, due to lack of transparency and other factors, MEC, MEHL and their subsidiaries make sizable tax payments. MEC was the eleventh largest tax payer in Myanmar in 2017-2018, MEHL was the third largest and MEHL subsidiary, Myawaddy Bank, the second largest.¹²⁸ Even so, research suggests that their contribution to Myanmar's tax base is deficient and surpassed by the resources they contribute to the Tatmadaw.¹²⁹ This indicates that much of the revenue generated by military businesses in Myanmar is not captured by the State and is consequently available to subsidize military operations, many of which the Mission has documented as resulting in gross violations of international human rights law and serious violations of international humanitarian law.¹³⁰

4. Contribution to the Tatmadaw

59. The degree to which business revenues fund Tatmadaw institutions, military operations or enrich its leadership, is not disclosed. However, credible analysis indicates that the Tatmadaw and its officials have a vested interest in armed conflict and violence as a way of maintaining their ability to capitalize on the conflict driven resource economy.¹³¹ According to a U.S. Embassy diplomatic cable, MEHL and MEC function as “key components of the elaborate system of patronage the [Tatmadaw] uses to maintain power”.¹³²

60. The Tatmadaw’s ability to supplement its budget with alternative sources of revenue, outside the official military budget, is a clear vehicle for bypassing civilian oversight. The Tatmadaw’s official budget, which is subject to legislative approval and contributes to Tatmadaw salaries and procurement¹³³, has been gradually reduced since 2015.¹³⁴ While the amount of revenue that the Tatmadaw accrues from its economic activities remains unclear, it is indisputable that its holding companies and their subsidiaries and its relationships with State-owned enterprises and private businesses contribute to funding the Tatmadaw’s leadership and operations. Examples examined in this report, such as company donations to Tatmadaw operations, illustrate the ability of the Tatmadaw to generate funds outside the official budget, thereby evading legislative approval and control.¹³⁵

TATMADAW LEADERS IN POSITIONS AT MEC, LTD.

Known hierarchy of the Tatmadaw

Other parts of government or Tatmadaw hierarchy

B. MEHL and MEC subsidiaries

61. Through its investigations, the Mission identified 120 military businesses that it concluded on reasonable grounds are fully owned by MEHL and MEC, among them 59 subsidiaries of MEHL and 61 subsidiaries of MEC. The Mission identified a further 27 businesses that it concluded on reasonable grounds are affiliated with MEHL and MEC through their corporate structures. The Mission is certain that it has not been successful in identifying all MEHL and MEC subsidiaries.

62. Identified MEHL subsidiaries span a diverse range of industries, including ruby and jade mining, cement manufacturing, construction, tourism, banking and insurance. MEHL businesses are structured into three departments: service, trade and production. The MEHL service department is led by Major General Aung Ye Win, a retired member of the Tatmadaw, who serves as a managing director.¹³⁶ The trade department is led by Dr. Tun Zan Aung, a director. The production department is led by Colonel Win Kyi, a retired Tatmadaw officer, and deputy managing director.¹³⁷

63. Under the production department, MEHL has 41 factories, including for the production of palm oil, sugar, soap and cement. Some of these factories supply others as part of an integrated production business. For example, the MEHL Kanpauk Oil Palm Estate and Palm Oil Mill Project in Tanintharyi Region produce raw oil for the MEHL Padonma Soap Factory in Mon State.¹³⁸ The Mission has also identified MEHL subsidiaries under its service and trade departments. MEHL subsidiaries include three beverage and drinking water companies, four companies producing construction materials, three construction businesses, five businesses in finance and insurance, four companies in the food, agriculture and fisheries sectors, two companies in the tourism sector and five trade and logistics firms. In the mining and gems sector, MEHL has 31 companies, including subsidiaries specializing in the extraction of jade and rubies.¹³⁹

64. MEC subsidiaries are equally diverse but with a greater focus on the production of raw materials, including coal and gas, and manufacturing. Among the subsidiaries, the Mission identified five companies in the finance and insurance sector, eight food production companies, seven companies producing raw materials and six companies in the telecommunications sector. These sectors are consistent with information that the Mission received characterizing MEC as a conglomerate that supplies natural resources to the Tatmadaw and operates factories manufacturing goods for use by the Tatmadaw.¹⁴⁰

65. Among their subsidiaries, MEHL and MEC also operate two of Myanmar's largest private banks.¹⁴¹ Established in 1993, Myawaddy Bank is owned by MEHL. As of March 2016, the International Finance Corporation of the World Bank reported Myawaddy Bank to have Ks 1.3 trillion in total assets (855 million USD), making it the fourth largest private bank in Myanmar.¹⁴² Its shares are held by serving and retired military personnel and related organizations such as the Veterans' Associations.¹⁴³ According to the German development agency Deutsche Gesellschaft für Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ) GmbH, in May 2018, Infosys, an Indian multinational corporation, partnered with Myawaddy Bank to provide it digital banking software.¹⁴⁴ Separately, MEC owns Innwa Bank, which was established in 1997.¹⁴⁵ GIZ found that Innwa Bank Limited is managed by retired and active military officers of the Tatmadaw, and it acts as a financial vehicle for the affiliates and subsidiaries of MEC.¹⁴⁶

66. While it remains unclear how much profit Myawaddy and Innwa banks generate for the Tatmadaw, they provide an important means for MEHL and MEC, their subsidiaries and their owners to access the international banking system, even when U.S. sanctions remained in place against their parent companies, MEHL and MEC.¹⁴⁷ By providing a public banking service, they also provide mechanisms by which the Tatmadaw can draw funds, sometimes compulsorily, from soldiers, military veterans and other Myanmar residents to fund their operations.

67. MEHL and MEC subsidiaries have a wide range of commercial activities across various industries throughout Myanmar. Many benefit from joint ventures with domestic Myanmar businesses. As discussed later in this report, MEHL and MEC subsidiaries are extensively involved in the extraction of jade and rubies in Kachin and Shan States.¹⁴⁸ Some of those subsidiaries, however, operate in other parts of the country and in other extractive industries. For example, MEHL's wholly owned subsidiary Myanmar Ruby Enterprise has a joint venture with a private company, Geo – 70 Co. Ltd., for the extraction of an “industrial raw material” in Sin Phyu Daing, in Dawei Township, Dawei District, Tanintharyi Region.¹⁴⁹

68. MEHL and MEC subsidiaries, as well as the Tatmadaw directly, own sizable amounts of land throughout Myanmar – much of it highly valuable real estate, generating a major revenue stream. The Mission received credible information that these include MEHL-owned Pynmabin Industrial Zone in Yangon, the Ministry of Defence-owned “Golden City” residential development in Yangon, and the Quartermaster General Office-owned land leased to the Sule Shangri-La Hotel and Sule Square commercial project.¹⁵⁰ Some foreign companies entering the Myanmar market rent their premises in MEHL, MEC and Tatmadaw owned or leased commercial real estate. One example is Telenor, a Norwegian telecommunications company and the largest 4G network provider in Myanmar with offices in Sule Square, Yangon.¹⁵¹ MEHL and MEC subsidiaries are also involved in the tourism industry. For example, MEHL operates Myawaddy Travels and Tours Co. Ltd. and Nawadae Hotel and Tourism Ltd.; MEC also runs the Okkala Golf Resort.¹⁵²

69. MEHL and MEC subsidiaries are also linked through familial ties to the Tatmadaw leadership. Aung Pyae Soe, the son of Senior General Min Aung Hlaing, is a major investor in MyTel, the MEC telecommunications joint venture and Myanmar's fourth largest telecommunications network service provider.¹⁵³ He also allegedly owns a significant stake in Aung Myint Moh Mint Insurance, a MEC subsidiary from which all Tatmadaw personnel are required to purchase insurance.¹⁵⁴

70. These subsidiaries benefit the Tatmadaw both through the revenues they generate for MEHL and MEC and also more directly as described in the section below concerning other principal means of contributing to Tatmadaw operations and wealth.

C. Tatmadaw's role and interests in State-owned enterprises

71. The Tatmadaw also benefits from relationships that MEHL and MEC have with Myanmar's State-owned enterprises (SOEs) both in and outside of the extractive sector. State-owned enterprises play a dominant role in Myanmar's economy, generating about half the government's revenue, spending half the government's budget and regulating much of the formal economy. The natural resource SOEs — namely the Myanmar Oil and Gas Enterprise (MOGE), the three Myanmar Mining Enterprises (ME1, ME2, and ME3), Myanmar Gems Enterprise (MGE) and Myanmar Timber Enterprise (MTE) — are some of the largest and most powerful of these entities.¹⁵⁵ Their finances, however, remain largely opaque.

72. Myanmar's SOEs have direct business relationships with MEHL and MEC. One instructive example is in the coal mining industry. According to Myanmar EITI, a coal mine in Kyauk Ohn Chaung, Kalaywa, Sagaing State is operated by Htoo Han Thit Co. Ltd. with proceeds from the mine divided with 31.5 per cent going to the SOE Mining Enterprise 1 (ME1), 67.5 per cent to Htoo Han Thit Co. Ltd. and one per cent to MEHL.¹⁵⁶

73. SOEs also have relationships with MEHL and MEC subsidiaries in other extractive industries. According to MEHL records, in Kayah State, MEHL's wholly owned subsidiary Kayah State Mineral Production Co. Ltd. has a strong business relationship with Ye Htut Kyaw Mining Extracting Co. Ltd., with the MEHL subsidiary Kayah State Mineral Production Co. Ltd. receiving a 13 per cent share of production of minerals, including tin, tungsten and scheelite, Ye Htut Kyaw Mining Extracting Co., Ltd. receiving a 54 per cent share and the SOE ME2 receiving the remaining 33 per cent.¹⁵⁷

74. Apart from the revenue they generate through their partnerships with MEHL, MEC and their subsidiaries, SOEs may also benefit the Tatmadaw more directly. As a result of reforms implemented in the 1990s and in 2012 through which the government granted SOEs greater financial autonomy, SOEs have adopted a practice of amassing large reserves in independent accounts that carry over from one year to the next. As a result, a significant portion of revenues from extractive industries in the oil and gas, gems and timber sectors are retained by SOEs under a budget line known as "Other Accounts". "Other Accounts" are considered to be a SOE's own funds and are held for the purpose of its exclusive operations and capital investment.¹⁵⁸ The Mission reviewed credible reports that the "Other Accounts" of SOEs are used to spread benefits to a network of private political patrons that support the government.¹⁵⁹ A clear example of this dynamic is the SOE Myanmar Gems Enterprise, whose leadership is dominated by former military officials, which the media has reported as being responsible for protecting the interests of Tatmadaw and Tatmadaw-linked businesses in the jade sector.¹⁶⁰ The Mission notes, however, the recent announcement by the Government that the “Other Accounts” of the extractive industry State-owned economic enterprises will be abolished and all their income will be transferred to the Union Government.¹⁶¹

D. Tatmadaw-linked private Myanmar companies and conglomerates

75. In 1998 the State Law and Order Restoration Council (SLORC) seized control of government operations, commencing a new period of Tatmadaw rule and partial liberalization of Myanmar’s economy.¹⁶² This came in response to widespread anti-government protests against human rights violations, high levels of corruption and economic mismanagement by the Burma Socialist Programme Party regime of Senior General Ne Win. During this period of partial economic liberalization, the SLORC fostered a political and economic system where connections with political leadership, rather than productivity and competitiveness, led to the success of private enterprises. This, in turn, gave rise to corruption and the inequitable distribution of public resources, promoting the growth of a number of private companies and conglomerates that profited from preferential treatment by the ruling military junta in exchange for political loyalty, and thus became known as “crony companies.”¹⁶³

76. Today, despite the changes in the political and economic landscape in Myanmar, the Tatmadaw, its conglomerates MEHL and MEC, and a number of crony companies remain closely linked through economic, commercial, familial, political and operational relationships that directly or indirectly benefit the Tatmadaw and its leadership. The Mission regards the following conglomerates as among the largest crony companies in Myanmar: Asia World Group, Eden Group, First Myanmar Group of Companies, Htoo Group, IBTC, IGE Group, Kanbawza Group (KBZ Group), Loi Hein, Max Myanmar, Shwe Taung, and Shwe Than Lwin Group.¹⁶⁴ Many but not all of these crony companies contributed financial support to the Tatmadaw in the form of donations solicited by the senior Tatmadaw leadership to support its operations in northern Rakhine, following the commencement of the “clearance operations” against the Rohingya in northern Rakhine on 25 August 2017.¹⁶⁵

77. Mining operations provide a clear illustration of the strong business interests of MEHL, MEC and its subsidiaries in crony companies. For example, according to Myanmar

EITI and corporate records, MEHL entered into an arrangement whereby it is allocated 20 per cent of the production of the Jing H paw Aung Jade mine in Kantee, Sagaing Region, which is licensed to the KBZ Group.¹⁶⁶

78. The links between domestic companies and MEHL, MEC and its subsidiaries are also reportedly familial. Ne Aung, the founder and chairperson of IGE Group, is reportedly the brother of Rear Admiral Moe Aung, the Chief of Staff of the Myanmar Navy and director of MEHL, MEC Ltd and some of their subsidiaries. IGE Group is a major conglomerate operating across various sectors including forestry, agriculture, construction and energy. IGE Group is also involved in Mytel, the MEC telecommunications joint venture and Myanmar's fourth largest telecommunications network service provider.¹⁶⁷

79. There are also serious allegations of crony companies concealing the wealth of the Tatmadaw and its leadership. These allegations require further investigation. The Mission notes however that the Managing Director of Asia World Group, Steven Law (also known as Htun Myint Naing), has been accused by the U.S. Government of involvement in laundering money for the Tatmadaw.¹⁶⁸ Asia World has three "overseas branch companies" in Singapore, run by Steven Law¹⁶⁹ and his spouse Cecilia Ng, a Singaporean national. More than half of Singapore's investment in Myanmar reportedly goes through partnerships with Asia World Group, totalling more than USD 1.3 billion.¹⁷⁰

IV. Tatmadaw and the extractive industry

80. Tatmadaw economic activity in some sectors is linked to its military strategy. This is particularly evident in the Tatmadaw's involvement in jade and ruby mining in Kachin and Shan States, where its economic interests overlap with its military objectives. The Tatmadaw's "Four Cuts" counterinsurgency policy, in place since the 1960s, is aimed at cutting off non-State armed groups from access to food, finances, intelligence and recruits from the local civilian population.¹⁷¹ The policy is consistent with the Tatmadaw "clearance operations", which include scorched earth campaigns in which large numbers of civilians are killed and entire villages are destroyed, leading to mass displacement.¹⁷² In natural resource-rich Kachin, Shan and Rakhine States, policies consistent with the “Four Cuts” strategy, aiming to gain control of resources while cutting-off resources and revenue to armed groups, have also been implemented through business activities in the extractive industries, which generate revenue for the Tatmadaw.

81. As previously reported by the Mission, many violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law have been committed within the context of the exploitation of natural resources or development projects by parties to the armed conflicts, including the Tatmadaw.¹⁷³ Some interviewees asserted that the Tatmadaw targeted them because they had witnessed illegal timber exploitation¹⁷⁴ or that they were tortured because the Tatmadaw wanted information on access to mines located in areas controlled by the Kachin Independence Army (KIA).¹⁷⁵ Victims and witnesses of hostilities in Tanai Township, Kachin State, in 2017 and 2018 said that the overall objective of the Tatmadaw operations was to destroy the KIA’s economy by appropriating amber and mining resources under KIA control.¹⁷⁶ The Mission also investigated a case from October 2015 of the Tatmadaw shooting at a group of villagers as they approached a gold mine in Tachilek Township in eastern Shan State. One man was shot and killed as a result. The group had walked to the mining area with a plan of discussing with company management concerns they had about the mine’s environmental hazards, including possible contamination of water sources.¹⁷⁷

82. As another example, though outside Kachin and Shan States, the Mission verified that on 20 December 2017 Tatmadaw soldiers killed three Karenni National Progressive Party (KNPP)/Karenni Army members and one civilian at a KNPP checkpoint in Kayah State.¹⁷⁸ The Tatmadaw soldiers held the men at the checkpoint and executed them on the spot. One KNPP member managed to escape and is now in hiding. The Mission has reasonable grounds to conclude that the victims were unlawfully killed because they observed the Tatmadaw transporting illegally logged timber.¹⁷⁹

A. Tatmadaw, MEHL and MEC involvement in jade and ruby mining in Kachin and Shan States

83. To understand better the nature and consequences of the Tatmadaw’s economic operations generally, the Mission examined more closely the involvement of the Tatmadaw and its holding companies in jade and ruby mining in Kachin and Shan States. The Tatmadaw benefits from and supports extractive industry businesses operating in conflict-affected areas in northern Myanmar, at a significant human cost. These industries include natural resources, particularly oil and gas, minerals and gems. According to the most up-to-date figures available to the Mission, in 2015-2016 the extractive sector accounted for 6 per cent of Myanmar’s GDP, 20 per cent of State revenue and 47.6 per cent of exports.¹⁸⁰ The extractive sector is the second largest source of foreign direct investment in Myanmar, with gas and gems being the two main revenue-generating commodities.¹⁸¹

84. One of the close, mutually beneficial relationships that the Mission has documented is between the Tatmadaw and mining businesses in Kachin and Shan States, in areas which have been affected by hostilities in the ongoing non-international armed conflict.¹⁸² Currently, much of MEHL and MEC's involvement in mining is in Kachin and Shan States. The Mission has identified 26 MEHL subsidiaries involved in jade and ruby mining.¹⁸³

85. The Tatmadaw's economic imprint extends beyond MEHL, MEC and their subsidiaries, particularly in northern Myanmar where the Tatmadaw operates other, distinct companies. For example, the Mission received information from a credible source that the Myanmar Northern Star Company, which is involved in jade mining in Hpakant, Kachin State, was founded by the Tatmadaw's Northern Command as a way to supplement Tatmadaw revenues.¹⁸⁴ Similar to MEHL and MEC, these other companies provide revenue to support regional Tatmadaw activities and operations, fuel conflict in mining areas and pose a barrier to civilian oversight of the Tatmadaw.¹⁸⁵ This is consistent with research that has found that since the early 2000s, higher-level Tatmadaw officials have granted land and resource concessions in Kachin and Shan States as a way to generate personal revenue and develop a political and economic power base.¹⁸⁶

1. Tatmadaw involvement in jade mining areas in Kachin State

(a) Hpakant Township

86. Jade mining areas and jade export routes from Kachin State to China have become heavily militarized, particularly since the Tatmadaw resumed hostilities against the KIA in June 2011, breaking a 17-year ceasefire. A recent US Institute of Peace report observed, "The jade mines in Hpakant have become a battlefield in two senses of the word: over who has the right to engage in rent-seeking opportunities, and as a war to push out the Kachin Independence Army (KIA) units from jade-producing (and taxing) areas".¹⁸⁷

87. The Mission received accounts that illustrate the human rights consequences of the Tatmadaw's heavy presence around jade mining areas in Hpakant Township, in addition to turf battles that result in direct hostilities. Victims provided the Mission with consistent accounts of being subjected to arbitrary detention and physical violence at the hands of Tatmadaw soldiers in Hpakant.¹⁸⁸ In 2016, for example, a "hand-picker" working at a jade mine in Hpakant said he was detained by Tatmadaw soldiers when passing through a checkpoint. The soldiers searched him, looking for raw jade. When the man told them he had no jade, he was beaten, his feet were cuffed and he was detained in a makeshift tent near a checkpoint for one night. Tatmadaw soldiers identified as being part of Northern Command were present at the checkpoint.¹⁸⁹ Another interviewee who worked as a miner for a jade mining company in Hpakant was subjected to similar searches by the Tatmadaw in 2013.¹⁹⁰ The Mission also received allegations that soldiers of the Light Infantry Division (LID) 33 stationed in Hpakant Township in 2013 looted civilian livestock.¹⁹¹ The Mission identified

LID 33 as one of the divisions most responsible for the crimes under international law perpetrated in northern Rakhine State from August to December 2017.¹⁹²

88. In addition to the Tatmadaw's violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law and the risk of hostilities erupting around mining areas, investigative journalists have found that the working conditions at the jade mines in Hpakant Township are highly hazardous.¹⁹³ According to the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation, more than 400,000 people work in the gemstone mines in northern Myanmar as "hand-pickers".¹⁹⁴ "Hand-pickers" or "kinase" have historically been women and children, but increasingly scarce jobs have pushed more men into these roles.¹⁹⁵ The New York Times reported that a July 2018 landslide in Hpakant Township killed 18 miners and injured a further 100 at a jade mine owned by a company associated with U Ohn Myint, a former commander of Northern Command and former Minister of Mining.¹⁹⁶ U Ohn Myint's jade mining company, Myanmar Win Gate, partners with MEHL.¹⁹⁷

(b) Tanai Township

89. The Mission has documented how the Tatmadaw's Northern Command, from the rank-and-file to the commander level, profits from the jade industry in the areas under its control in Tanai Township, Kachin State.¹⁹⁸ The militarization of mining areas manifests through a network of Tatmadaw checkpoints, which have been sites of international human rights and international humanitarian law violations against jade miners.

90. Since November 2017 the Tatmadaw and the KIA have engaged in armed conflict around the amber and gold mines near Noiye Bum hill, south of Tanai town, resulting in civilian casualties.¹⁹⁹ Additionally, the Mission documented civilians being abducted into forced labour in Tanai by the Tatmadaw in 2016.²⁰⁰

²⁰⁰ PI-061; For further information on a pattern of forced labour used by the Tatmadaw in and around mining, see: International Labour Conference, Committee on the Application of Standards, C.App./PV.4/ Myanmar/C29, Myanmar Forced Labour Convention, 1930 (No. 29), 13 June 2019, pg 16, which noted that "forced labour is also persistent in the private sector. In 2016, the ILO undertook a detailed survey on child labour and agriculture and specifically in inland fisheries, sugarcane and beans. The findings of that survey were alarming and found that in all three subsectors, children were in conditions of forced labour. Creditable reports have indicated that men, women and children are found in situations of forced labour in agriculture, fishing and prospecting for jade and other precious stones. The use of forced labour in the jade industry has attracted significant international attention in recent years. The mines are guarded by the Tatmadaw and their presence, and the presence of armed ethnic groups, has led to increased abuses such as rape and forced labour around mine sites. Those who risk their lives to extract the jade in this multibillion dollar industry see little for their labour, with the vast majority of the benefit going to the army and traders."

91. The Mission documented numerous accounts of violations of international human rights and international humanitarian law perpetrated by the Tatmadaw in Tanai, Kachin State, including the rape of a female miner in an amber mining area in 2016.²⁰¹ The heavy Tatmadaw presence in these areas is accompanied by harassment of the local population, including through small-scale corruption. In Tanai, the Northern Command extracts bribes from both miners and mining companies operating in the area. One goldminer told the Mission that he and other miners had to pay local Tatmadaw soldiers to be permitted to mine amber and gold at the “Pha Ka” mine in Ting Kawk village near Noiye Bum hill.²⁰² Another person described working in Tanai for a company called Season Star, and how the company bribed a commander of Northern Command to secure its mining license.²⁰³ Season Star is one of the main mining companies operating in Tanai.²⁰⁴

92. The Mission has also documented the Tatmadaw’s direct involvement in amber mining in the Namyang mining area, located near Tanai Township. Tatmadaw soldiers abducted civilians for forced labour to mine amber and subjected them to physical and sexual violence. One witness described how in November 2016 the Tatmadaw took five men by force to work for the Tatmadaw in the Namyang amber mining area.²⁰⁵ One woman, who had also been abducted for forced labour at the amber mine, and her son were taken into the forest in the mining area by two Tatmadaw soldiers. She told the Mission, “They did something very bad to me. They harassed me. They slapped me. They threw my son back to me after they were finished.” After she was raped by one Tatmadaw soldier, the other said it was his turn. She told the Mission, “I think he did not finish me off because my son was crying, there are also other tents in the mining area... maybe because of the noise he did not rape me too.”²⁰⁶

2. MEHL and MEC involvement in jade and ruby mining in Kachin and Shan States

93. The majority of jade and rubies on the world markets originate from Myanmar. In addition to direct Tatmadaw involvement, the significant involvement of Tatmadaw companies in the jade and ruby industries means that there is a high risk that revenue from the sale of jade and rubies benefits the Tatmadaw. Ninety per cent of all jade bought and sold in the world in any given year originates from Myanmar.²⁰⁷ Estimates of the value of the Myanmar jade trade are as high as USD 31 billion,²⁰⁸ nearly half the country’s official GDP of USD 69 billion.²⁰⁹ Similarly, according to one estimate published in 2007, 90 per cent of rubies on world markets have at times originated from Myanmar.²¹⁰ According to reports, the vast majority of Myanmar’s jade is exported – both legally and illegally – to China.²¹¹

Chinese customs data supports these claims, showing that less than a third of Myanmar’s official jade production entered China legally, even though China is where almost all Myanmar’s jade ends up.”

Available reliable data indicates that imports of jade into the European Union from Myanmar have spiked since 2016.²¹² According to additional available reliable data, imports of rubies and other precious stones into the European Union from Myanmar have steadily increased from 2015 to 2017, with the trade value totalling over USD 56.2 million in 2017.²¹³ As previously noted, the Mission identified 26 MEHL subsidiaries in the jade and ruby mining industry.²¹⁴

94. Tatmadaw conglomerates MEHL and MEC are among the largest jade producers in Kachin State and globally.²¹⁵ MEHL recorded USD 230 million in official sales in 2013 and 2014, the second highest combined sales of any jade company in Myanmar during that two-year period,²¹⁶ and in 2016 and 2017, was ranked among the ten highest value producers of jade.²¹⁷ According to the Myanmar Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI Myanmar), 614 licenses have been awarded to MEHL jade subsidiaries²¹⁸.

95. Both of the Tatmadaw's conglomerates are significant players in the jade business in Hpakant Township, Kachin State, where the Mission has documented international human rights and international humanitarian law violations by the Tatmadaw.²¹⁹ MEC has 22 jade permits, with many of them in Hpakant Township, Kachin State.²²⁰ In Hpakant, MEC has a joint venture in the production of jade with Silver Elephant Gems and Jewellery Co. Ltd,²²¹ which alone produces the fifth highest volume of jade in Myanmar.²²² MEHL is also involved in jade production in Hpakant, through its wholly owned subsidiary, Myanmar Imperial Jade, which has a joint venture with Myanmar Aung Naing Yay Moke Oo Company in Hpakant Township, Kachin State.²²³

96. MEHL is also heavily involved in ruby mining in Shan State. The ruby mines in Mong Hsu in Shan State are under military control.²²⁴ No entity can mine there without being subjected to the “explicit or implicit oversight of the Tatmadaw”.²²⁵ A wholly owned ruby mining subsidiary of MEHL, Myanmar Ruby Enterprise, has at least 16 subsidiaries carrying out ruby mining.²²⁶ According to the Myanmar Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI Myanmar), 476 licenses have been awarded to MEHL ruby subsidiaries²²⁷. Reports on the total number of ruby mining permits held by the Tatmadaw’s other main conglomerate, MEC, in both Mogok, Mandalay State and Mong Hsu, Shan State, vary from 31 to 95.²²⁸ As one example, MEC collaborates with Great Nine Gems and Jewellery Co. Ltd. in the extraction of rubies in Shan State.²²⁹

97. In addition to obtaining licenses for its own operations, MEHL and MEC act as unofficial gatekeepers for private companies seeking access to ruby mining plots and licenses.²³⁰ It has been reported that Tatmadaw conglomerates play a role in the bidding process for jade mining licenses. According to a U.S. diplomatic cable, Kachin miners have said that partnering with MEHL ensures the best results during the bidding process for licenses. They also explained how the Tatmadaw conglomerates benefit from such partnerships, claiming more than their share of profits from the subsequent mining operations and sales.²³¹

98. MEHL and MEC subsidiaries are also engaged in other extractive industries in Shan State. Further investigation is required into their mining activities in Shan State, to determine their relationship with ongoing Tatmadaw operations in mining areas and documented international human rights and international humanitarian law violations. In addition to jade and ruby mining, a subsidiary of MEHL’s Myanmar Ruby Enterprise Thit Sar Pan (Jewellery) Co. Ltd. collaborates with Game Gemstone Co. Ltd. in the extraction of gold from Moh Hark, in Moe Mate Township, Shan State.²³² MEC Director Khin Maung Soe also serves as a director of a gold mining company, Aye Mya Pye Sone Gold & Mining Production

99. While the conduct of ethnic armed organizations (EAOs) is outside the scope of this report, the Mission notes that, since the early 1990s, the Tatmadaw has coupled brutal counter-insurgency campaigns against EAOs with offers to share the proceeds from natural resource extraction with EAOs in exchange for signing ceasefire agreements²³⁵. The Mission has documented how this has led to incentives for both Tatmadaw and EAOs in contested areas to profit from direct resource extraction.²³⁶ The Mission has also reviewed research on how they have entered into commercial joint ventures, formal and informal taxation arrangements and money-laundering.²³⁷ The media and investigative organizations have also implicated private companies in these arrangements, appropriating or exploiting natural resources by collaborating with or upon the authorization of an EAO.²³⁸ All of these are areas of concern that require further investigation.

3. Legal findings on jade and ruby mining in Kachin and Shan States

100. The Mission concludes on reasonable grounds that the Tatmadaw's business and military interests in the jade and ruby extractive industries benefited from and directly contributed to international human rights violations in conflict-affected areas in Kachin State. The Mission has a similar concern with respect to Shan State due to the existence of hostilities in that state. The Tatmadaw has used forced labour to increase mining revenue and has used mining areas as staging grounds for abductions, forced labour, sexual violence and murder. The perpetration of these serious violations suggests that civilians, in particular women, living and working in mining areas are at a particularly heightened risk of experiencing sexual violence by the Tatmadaw. Many of the human rights violations the Mission documented are also violations of international humanitarian law and some rise to the level of war crimes, due to their association with non-international armed conflict.

101. The Mission also finds specifically that hostilities around Hpakant and Tanai Townships in Kachin State are inextricably linked to the natural resource economy in these areas. The Mission has documented numerous accounts of fighting taking place at or around mining areas, with the apparent objective of the parties to the conflict obtaining control over the resources or destroying their adversary's economy.²³⁹

102. The interdependent relationship between the Tatmadaw, the mining industry, and violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law in various mining areas leads the Mission to conclude on reasonable grounds that Myanmar has failed to apply the content of the Guiding Principles effectively. Myanmar specifically failed in its obligation to respect and ensure respect for international human rights and international humanitarian law through the unlawful acts of the Tatmadaw and by not effectively regulating the mining industry and preventing and mitigating the risks to human life to which their activities contribute.

103. The Mission also found reasonable grounds to conclude that any extractive industry business seeking to do business or doing business in Kachin and Shan States should fulfil their responsibility to respect human rights by not contracting with Tatmadaw-related businesses (including their subsidiaries) directly or indirectly – i.e. they should not source from or have Tatmadaw-related businesses in their supply chain, given the involvement of the Tatmadaw in natural resource extraction and its responsibility for violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law in mining areas.²⁴⁰ Doing so could expose them to criminal and civil liability.

104. In addition, any businesses seeking to or doing business in these areas should conduct heightened due diligence to ensure it is not otherwise causing, contributing to or directly linked to the many international human rights and international humanitarian law violations in the area perpetrated by the Tatmadaw. In line with the Guiding Principles, any extractive industry business should also conduct heightened due diligence to ensure that they are not exacerbating the conflict (conflict sensitive due diligence) and to ensure that its operations do not result in negative human rights impacts, even in these challenging operating environments. Tiffany & Co. is an example of a company that demonstrated a sensitivity to this responsibility when it reported publicly on its decision to “go above and beyond government regulations” after the lifting of U.S. sanctions in 2016, and not purchase gemstones from Myanmar since the 2003 U.S. Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act, which was adopted due to the severity of human rights violations in Myanmar.²⁴¹

A. Donor companies

1. Companies’ donations to Union Enterprise for Humanitarian Assistance, Resettlement and Development in Rakhine

105. The Mission concludes on reasonable grounds that several crony companies are implicated in the Myanmar Government’s concerted effort to fundamentally alter the landscape of northern Rakhine State during and following the “clearance operations” against the Rohingya that began on 25 August 2017. Much of this has been done in the name of “development”, with the Government espousing a clear discourse that the economic development of northern Rakhine is the solution to root causes of the violence.²⁴² As the Mission has documented, the impact of the 2017 violence against the Rohingya, which included the displacement of over 850,000 and the death of thousands, is being cemented through civilian Government and Tatmadaw-led activities making it very difficult if not impossible for the Rohingya to return to their villages of origin and access their properties and communities. Some of these activities include: construction of the border fence, an inadequate framework for repatriation, lack of conditions conducive for return, use of landmines at the border, demolition and other forms of terrain clearance, security-related construction, construction of other infrastructure, and the destruction of evidence.²⁴³

²⁴³ A/HRC/39/CRP.2, paragraphs 1180-1244.

106. This infrastructure development has been predominantly orchestrated by the Government's Union Enterprise for Humanitarian Assistance, Resettlement and Development in Rakhine (UEHRD), a public-private partnership for implementing government policy in Rakhine State, formed in response to widespread international condemnation of the "clearance operations" that began in August 2017 in northern Rakhine State. In addition to its stated aim of providing humanitarian assistance to violence-affected populations and facilitating the return of Rohingya refugees from Bangladesh, the UEHRD formed an Infrastructure Development and Construction Task Force to renovate buildings and undertake new construction in partnership with private companies. For reasons stated above and elaborated on below, the Mission does not assess these development projects as benefiting the Rohingya people.

107. The UEHRD is chaired by State Counsellor Aung San Suu Kyi, with Dr. Win Myat Aye, the Union Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement, as vice chairperson.²⁴⁴ During a ceremony held in Nay Pyi Taw on 20 October 2017, owners of various companies pledged close to USD 13.5 million to the UEHRD for this reconstruction.²⁴⁵ In support of the UEHRD initiative, Asia World Group, Eden Group, KBZ Group, and Max Myanmar have been involved in the construction of roads that go through villages destroyed in the 2017 clearance operations,²⁴⁶ the building of processing sites for Rohingya that have been described as internment camps,²⁴⁷ and the construction of a border fence between Myanmar and Bangladesh.²⁴⁸

108. Asia World Group, as part of UEHRD's Infrastructure Development and Construction Task Force, built an 80 kilometre road in northern Rakhine State through its charitable arm, the Foundation of the Asia World Group.²⁴⁹ Satellite imagery and analysis shows that the road connects Ah Ngu Maw village tract, at the southern tip of the peninsula in Rathedaung Township, with the border crossing at Taung Pyo Let Yar.²⁵⁰ The route runs through many of the villages attacked and burned during the 2017 violence, including Koe Tan Kauk²⁵¹ and Inn Din.²⁵²

109. Chit Khine, the chairperson of Eden Group, has announced that his construction company would build one of two processing sites for returning Rohingya refugees in Nga Khu Ya near the Myanmar-Bangladesh border.²⁵³ Local civil society organisations have serious concerns that these processing sites will function as internment camps, given their similarities to the displacement camps and sites established after the 2012 violence in Rakhine where around 1.2 million displaced Rohingya people still live seven years later.²⁵⁴ The Mission has found these camps to be effectively places of deprivation of liberty.²⁵⁵

110. In addition to the projects described above, the civilian Government and the Tatmadaw began in earnest soliciting donations to reinforce a barrier fence between Myanmar and Bangladesh. On 6 September 2017, a high-level meeting was held in Nay Pyi Taw, at which President U Htin Kyaw, State Counsellor Aung San Suu Kyi, Senior General Min Aung Hlaing and Vice Senior General Soe Win reportedly discussed the need to urgently repair fences and construct new barriers along the Myanmar-Bangladesh border.²⁵⁶ Although the barrier fence had been previously discussed in Parliament on several earlier occasions,²⁵⁷ its reinforcement and construction did not appear to have been a priority for the Myanmar Government up to this point, as no budget had been allocated to the Ministry of Home Affairs for it in the 2017-2018 fiscal year.²⁵⁸ Following the forcible deportation of the Rohingya to Bangladesh,²⁵⁹ however, strengthening the barrier became an urgent priority for the Government. The spokesperson for the President's Office stated, "We will fence it by all means... We don't know where the funds will come from, but we'll do it anyway."²⁶⁰ The Mission found that the civilian government raised funds for the fence through UEHRD. In this context, the purpose of the fence is revealed as one of several UEHRD projects aimed at ensuring the Rohingya cannot return to their communities and homeland.

111. In tandem, the Tatmadaw also solicited funds to build the barrier fence. This is elaborated in detail below in the section concerning the Tatmadaw fundraising ceremonies. During at least two of the three ceremonies, Commander-in-Chief, Senior General Min Aung Hlaing specifically sought donations to reinforce the fence.

112. Strengthening the barrier commenced in early September 2017, with the Commander-in-Chief, Senior General Min Aung Hlaing, confirming the construction in public statements at that time.²⁶¹ The border area was reportedly further fortified with additional troops and military posts.²⁶² According to witnesses, following the “clearance operations” that began in August 2017, Tatmadaw soldiers and Myanmar Border Guard started installing barbed wire fencing at the Myanmar-Bangladesh border with Rakhine State. New barriers were erected 200 metres from the border in Myanmar territory to avoid consultations with Bangladesh authorities required for any construction within 150 metres of the international border.²⁶³ One such barrier, made out of reinforced concrete, surrounds approximately 4,000 Rohingya internally displaced persons (IDPs) living less than 200 meters from the Bangladesh border inside Myanmar territory in Konar Para, segregating them from the rest of Myanmar.²⁶⁴ In 2018 Rohingya told the UN Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Myanmar that on the Myanmar side of the fence loudspeakers play a recording telling them that it is illegal for them to be there and demanding that they leave the area.²⁶⁵ This is a further indication that the fence’s purpose was to keep Rohingya away from their homes and off their land. The Experts of the Mission visited this community and spoke to its leaders in May 2019.²⁶⁶ By March 2018 new fencing was reportedly completed along all but 60 kilometres of the border, following a February 2018 parliamentary approval of USD 15 million for this purpose.²⁶⁷ The timing and the context of the fence’s re-inforcement and purpose further substantiates the Mission’s previous finding that the building of the fence substantially contributed to an official plan or policy that prevents the Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh from returning to their homeland and communities.²⁶⁸

113. The Mission found that companies played a substantial role in the Government’s building of this barrier fence along the Bangladesh-Myanmar border. In late October 2017, as people were still fleeing to Cox’s Bazaar, Bangladesh,²⁶⁹ KBZ Group donated USD 2.2

million to UEHRD through its charitable arm, the Brighter Future Foundation, to build a section of the border fence between Myanmar and Bangladesh.²⁷⁰ The media reported that Nyo Myint, senior managing director of KBZ Group, said his donation was meant to deter illegal migration.²⁷¹ The Mission has determined that reference to “illegal migration” is indicative of the pervasive climate of hatred and contempt toward the Rohingya and a false narrative propagated to breed hatred against the Rohingya.²⁷²

114. Also in late October 2017, Max Myanmar’s Ayeyarwady Foundation reported that chairperson Zaw Zaw donated Ks 1 billion (USD 654,000) to the UEHRD during a fundraising ceremony on 20 October 2017,²⁷³ at which the State Counsellor spoke about improving the border fence.²⁷⁴ The media subsequently reported that Zaw Zaw accompanied the State Counsellor on a visit to northern Rakhine on 2 November 2017.²⁷⁵

2. Business donations to the Tatmadaw for the “clearance operations” following fundraising ceremonies

115. In the month following the “clearance operations” in northern Rakhine State that began on 25 August 2017, the Commander-in-Chief, Senior General Min Aung Hlaing, and other high-ranking Tatmadaw leaders held three ceremonies in Nay Pyi Taw, Yangon and Sittwe to solicit donations in support of the Tatmadaw’s military and other activities in northern Rakhine against the Rohingya. This is yet another example of the Tatmadaw’s ability to acquire financial resources in support of its activities but without civilian oversight.

116. During these meetings, Senior General Min Aung Hlaing made statements describing the conduct of the Tatmadaw in northern Rakhine, outlined the policy and military objectives of the “clearance operations”, denied the existence of the Rohingya and advanced justifications for the Tatmadaw’s acts. He framed his request for donations in the false hateful narrative of the Tatmadaw having a responsibility to protect the country from the invading Rohingya people while refusing to acknowledge their identity, referring the Rohingya in a derogatory manner as “Bengali”. He said: “The Bengali problem was a long-standing one which has become an unfinished job.”²⁷⁶ Senior General Min Aung Hlaing’s official website provided lengthy descriptions of the content of these ceremonies, who attended and what donations attendees provided.

117. Tatmadaw leaders solicited donations for the construction of the border fence between Myanmar and Bangladesh; security and other personnel; and ethnic Rakhine victims of the violence.²⁷⁷ Donations were collected during the ceremonies by Senior General Min Aung

Hlaing and other Tatmadaw leaders, including the Deputy Commander-in-Chief Soe Win, and the commanders-in-chief of the Air Force and Navy. In total, based on information reported on the official website of the Commander-in-Chief, the Mission has identified 45 businesses and organizations from which the Tatmadaw leadership solicited and received financial support for its “clearance operations” against the Rohingya that began in August 2017 in northern Rakhine. The three ceremonies yielded over USD 10.2 million for the Tatmadaw.²⁷⁸ Many of the donors had family or other forms of close links to the Tatmadaw. The donors included Tatmadaw and other government officials, the families of high-ranking Tatmadaw leaders, private businesses, the foundations of large conglomerates, MEHL, MEC, as well as their subsidiaries and joint venture partners. It is particularly noteworthy that among the foreign businesses partnering with MEHL or MEC, Kirin Holdings Pte Ltd. provided financial support to the Tatmadaw during the first of these fundraising ceremonies.²⁷⁹ The Mission notes that following a public condemnation from Amnesty International,²⁸⁰ Kirin Holdings Pte Ltd. issued a response which demonstrated its sensitivity to external scrutiny by taking measures to influence MEHL, their joint venture partner, by announcing a 6-step action plan.²⁸¹

118. The first fundraising ceremony was held one week after the “clearance operations” began on 25 August 2017. On 1 September 2017 Senior General Min Aung Hlaing presided over a ceremony in Nay Pyi Taw, calling for “cash donations for security personnel and State service personnel who risked their lives while shouldering national defence and security duties and ethnic natives who fled their homes due to brutal attacks of ARSA extremist Bengali terrorists”.²⁸² During the ceremony, Senior General Min Aung Hlaing justified the actions of the Tatmadaw in northern Rakhine through a false narrative that treated all Rohingya as murderous invaders, stating that “absolutely, our country has no Rohingya race”.²⁸³ He stated that the “Bengali problem was a long-standing one which has become an unfinished job”.²⁸⁴ In the presence of Deputy Commander-in-Chief of Defence Services and Commander-in-Chief (Army) Vice Senior General Soe Win, Union Ministers Lieutenant-

A translation of the banner is as follows: “Second ceremony to present cash and kind to Security forces, departmental staff who risked their lives for national security and defence duties in Rakhine State, and the displaced natives who had to leave their homes due to the violent attacks of the ARSA extremist Bengali terrorists; and to erect the border fence.” (<http://www.seniorgeneralminaunghlaing.com/2017/09/cash-donations-will-be-used-in-areas.html?view=mosaic>).

General Sein Win and Lieutenant-General Ye Aung, Chief of the General Staff (Army, Navy and Air) General Mya Tun Oo, Commander-in-Chief (Navy) Admiral Tin Aung San, Commander-in-Chief (Air) General Khin Aung Myint and other senior military officers, parliamentary representatives, Yangon Region Minister for Rakhine Ethnic Affairs U Zaw Aye Maung, and members of the Arakan National Party, the Commander-in-Chief and other high-ranking members of the Tatmadaw accepted donations from businesses, foundations of conglomerates, and the families of Tatmadaw leaders, including MEHL and its partner businesses.²⁸⁵

119. On 10 September 2017, Senior General Min Aung Hlaing held a second ceremony soliciting cash donations at Command Headquarters in Yangon, where he also called for donations for border fencing.²⁸⁶ He and other high-ranking members of the Tatmadaw then accepted donations from businesses, including foundations of conglomerates, the families of Tatmadaw leaders, MEHL and numerous partner businesses, as well as MEC subsidiaries and joint ventures such as Mytel Co. Ltd., Myawaddy Bank Ltd. and MEHL-NORINCO joint venture, the Monywa Letpadaung copper mine.²⁸⁷

120. On 21 September 2017, Senior General Min Aung Hlaing held a third ceremony in Sittwe, Rakhine State, with a similar purpose as the two previous ceremonies. During the ceremony, he spoke of the Tatmadaw's "deployment of troops in advance for area clearance operations", conduct against "extremist Bengali terrorists" and "erecting the border fence".²⁸⁸ He and other high-ranking members of the Tatmadaw then accepted donations from companies, foundations of conglomerates, the families of Tatmadaw leaders and the Race and Religion Protection Buddha Dhamma Parahita Foundation, commonly known as the MaBaTha.²⁸⁹

121. In total, 30 companies, often represented by their owners or directors, donated to the Tatmadaw. Among them, the Mission has identified six owned by former or retired Tatmadaw officials or Tatmadaw leaders' family members. One of the subsidiaries of the Aung Myin Thu Group of Companies, which donated a total of Ks 60 million (USD 42,857) on 1 and 21 September 2017, is led by Senior General Min Aung Hlaing's daughter-in-law.²⁹⁰ The Authentic Group of Companies, the family company of former Air Force Commander-in-Chief Major General Tin Tun, donated a total of Ks 60 million (USD 42,857) on 1 and 21 September 2017.²⁹¹

122. The single largest donor to the Tatmadaw's three fundraising ceremonies was the International Gateways Group of Company Ltd., which donated Ks 6.3 billion (over USD 4.5 million) on 10 September 2017.²⁹² The Mission was unable to obtain detailed information on this group. However, the media has reported that its owners have previously participated in Tatmadaw fundraising events.²⁹³

123. MEC and MEHL subsidiaries also made significant donations during the ceremonies. MEHL and its partners, such as Myawaddy Trading and Myawaddy Bank, donated a total of Ks 265 million (USD 189,000) on 1 and 10 September 2017 during the Tatmadaw's fundraising ceremonies in support of the Tatmadaw's "clearance operations" that began on 25 August 2017 against the Rohingya in northern Rakhine.²⁹⁴ As part of the same fundraising drive, MEC and its partners donated Ks 18.2 million (USD 13,000) to the Tatmadaw on 10 September 2017.²⁹⁵ Other MEHL and MEC subsidiaries, such as Mytel and the Ngwe Pinlae Livestock Breeding and Fisheries Company, donated a further Ks 17.1 million (USD 12,100) to the Tatmadaw.²⁹⁶

124. IGE Group, a private Myanmar company with family links to senior Tatmadaw officials, also donated Ks 50 million (USD 35,000) to the Tatmadaw on 1 September 2017 in connection with the "clearance operations" that began on 25 August 2017 in northern Rakhine.²⁹⁷

125. Many of the foundations that made donations are linked to corporate groups with operational links to the Tatmadaw's businesses.²⁹⁸ For example, the Brighter Future Foundation of the Kanbawza Group of Companies (KBZ Group) donated Ks 300 million on 1 September 2017 and Ks 3.17 billion on 10 September 2017, amounting to almost USD 2.5 million. The KBZ Group is a major conglomerate with dozens of subsidiaries across industries such as construction, garments, insurance, banking, oil, communications, cement, aviation and mining.²⁹⁹ In addition to its past ties with Myanmar's military junta and the contributions it made to UEHRD, an investigative organization found that the KBZ Group currently partners with MEC through a joint venture in Jing Hpaw Aung Jade, a company operating jade mines in Kachin State.³⁰⁰

126. Max Myanmar's chairperson Zaw Zaw through the Ayeyarwady Foundation donated nearly Ks 1.37 billion at the 1 September 2017 and 21 September 2017 fundraising ceremonies (totalling USD 976,857) to the Tatmadaw to support construction of two miles of fence along the Bangladesh border.³⁰¹

127. The Eden Group, which donated Ks 30 million (USD 21,000) to the Tatmadaw on 1 September 2017, operates the Tigyit mine, Myanmar's largest coal mine in Shan State, together with a mine mouth power plant.³⁰² MAPCO, an Eden Group subsidiary, is also part of Mytel, the mobile network partly-owned by MEC.³⁰³ Asia World Group, which donated Ks 10 million (USD 7,142) on 10 September 2017, has a build-operate-transfer agreement with MEC for a port in Ahlone, near Yangon.³⁰⁴ Other donors, such as the Race and Religion Protection Buddha Dhamma Parahita Foundation, commonly known as the MaBaTha, which donated Ks 200 million (approximately USD 143,000)³⁰⁵ played an important role in fuelling anti-Muslim violence in Myanmar.³⁰⁶ The Mission received credible reports suggesting direct links between the leadership of MaBaTha and the Tatmadaw or some members of the Government affiliated with the Tatmadaw, suggesting that the relationship includes financial incentives.³⁰⁷

3. Legal Analysis and Findings

128. The Mission concludes on reasonable grounds that the Tatmadaw and civilian authorities of the UEHRD have sought support from crony companies to pursue an objective of changing the demographic landscape on northern Rakhine and keeping Rohingya displaced from Myanmar in a manner that is causing them considerable inhumane suffering. The Mission also concludes on reasonable grounds that several crony companies have willingly and knowingly provided such support and that the Tatmadaw has received this support outside the purview of effective civilian oversight. With these findings, the Mission also concludes that the companies providing their financial support to the Tatmadaw and UEHRD's activities noted above are failing in their corporate responsibility to respect human rights and have also failed to effectively conduct due diligence to ensure they are not otherwise causing, contributing to or directly linked to the many international human rights and international humanitarian law violations in the area perpetrated by the Tatmadaw and the civilian government.

(a) Liability of company officials for contributing to the construction of the barrier fence

129. In its 2018 report, the Mission concluded on reasonable grounds that crimes under international law were committed in Rakhine State, principally by the Tatmadaw.³⁰⁸ The crimes included the crimes against humanity of deportation and persecution. For reasons set out below, the Mission now has reasonable grounds to also conclude that officials from KBZ Group and Max Myanmar should be criminally investigated and, if appropriate, prosecuted for making a substantial and direct contribution to the commission of the crime against humanity of "other inhumane acts" and persecution as outlined above in the applicable legal framework on business officials and criminal liability. The Mission came to this conclusion based on its finding that these company officials donated funds to the construction of a barrier fence along the Myanmar-Bangladesh border and were aware of the substantial likelihood that the fence would contribute to the prevention of the displaced Rohingya population from returning to their homeland and community, thereby causing great suffering and anguish.

Moreover, the Rohingya population was explicitly targeted and discriminated against based on their ethnicity, constituting the crime against humanity of persecution.³⁰⁹

130. The crime against humanity of “other inhumane acts” is seen as a residual crime³¹⁰ and envisages physical or mental suffering, namely serious or great suffering rather than severe pain or suffering.³¹¹ The seriousness of the harm or injury must be assessed on a case-by-case basis, taking into consideration various factors including the nature of the act or omission, the context in which it occurs, its duration and/or repetition, and its physical and mental effects on the victim. The harm inflicted does not need to be permanent and irremediable; it must, however, have more than a short-term or temporary effect on the victim.³¹²

131. Where international courts have found that forcible transfer amounts to a crime against humanity of “other inhumane acts”, they have explained the inherent suffering that it produces.³¹³ The tribunals have found consistently that the rights violated by deportation and forcible transfer are the “right of the victim to stay in his or her home and community and the right not to be deprived of his or her property by being forcibly displaced to another location”.³¹⁴ The Appeals Chamber in Prosecutor v. Krnojelac expanded on the underlying harms of forced displacement when it explained that it is the “forced character of displacement and the forced uprooting of the inhabitants of a territory” that entails criminal responsibility, as opposed to the destination to which these victims are sent.³¹⁵ The Krajsnik

This condition is satisfied in the present case. The acts of forcible transfer were of similar seriousness to the instances of deportation, as they

Appeals Chamber endorsed the Trial Chamber's finding that "suffering serious mental harm" invariably occurs in situations of "forced departure from the residence and the community, without guarantees concerning the possibility to return in the future".³¹⁶

132. The value of safeguarding the right and aspiration of individuals to live in their communities and homes, and the conditions of suffering outlined above apply to the Rohingya's inability to return to their homes. Inability to access one's property and live in one's own home results in serious mental suffering comparable to that of forcible transfer or deportation, and therefore, under the category of "other inhumane acts", it is as serious and grave as those classes of crimes against humanity.³¹⁷

133. The Mission recognizes the sovereign right of States to secure, manage, and maintain their borders. They must not, however, do so in a manner contrary to international law, including in a manner that constitutes or contributes to a crime under international law. In its investigation into the human rights situation of the Rohingya, based on the totality of the following circumstances, the Mission has concluded on reasonable grounds that the barrier fence, in conjunction with other measures undertaken by the Myanmar Government and the Tatmadaw, has the purpose of preventing the displaced Rohingya from accessing their homeland.³¹⁸ First, the government prioritized the reinforcement of the fence immediately after the clearance operations began to force thousands of Rohingya out of Myanmar due to mass killings and forced displacement. Although there were earlier discussions about securing the fence, it did not become an urgent priority for the civilian government³¹⁹ and the Tatmadaw³²⁰ until this point. Second, the stated purpose of the donations in the Tatmadaw Commander-in-Chief Senior General Min Aung Hlaing's speech during each of the fundraising ceremonies explicitly indicates that the aim is to prevent the Rohingya from returning to Myanmar. In speaking of the "root causes" of tension in Rakhine State, he stated: "The Bengali problem was a long-standing one which has become an unfinished job despite the efforts of the previous governments to solve it... we openly declare that "absolutely, our country has no Rohingya race".³²¹ Third, the situation at Konar Para is particularly revealing involved a forced departure from the residence and the community, without guarantees concerning the possibility to return in the future, with the victims of such forced transfers invariably suffering serious mental harm Appeal Judgement para 331.

³¹⁶ Judgement, Krajsnik (ICTY IT-00-39-A), Appeals Chamber, 17 March 2009, paragraph 331.

³¹⁷ The Decision on the "Prosecution's Request for a Ruling on Jurisdiction under Article 19(3) of the Statute" concerning the situation of Bangladesh and Myanmar similarly suggested that inhumane acts were present; however, the Pre-Trial Chamber relied on the right of return whereas the Mission draws on the same rights as those protected by the crimes against humanity of deportation and forcible transfer. (ICC-RoC46(3)-01/18 at paragraph 77).

³¹⁸ This finding has been made previously, first by the Mission in its 2018 Report, A/HRC/38.CRP.2, at paragraph 1215. The Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court also adopts this conclusion in their "Request for authorization of an investigation pursuant to article 15" dated 4 July 2019, ICC-01/19 at paragraphs 153-154.

³¹⁹ The issue of the barrier fence was raised on 6 September 2017 at a joint high-level meeting and on 20 October 2017 at a UEHRD fundraising ceremony

³²⁰ This is evidenced by the Tatmadaw fundraising ceremonies on 10 and 21 September 2017, and possibly on 1 September. Although the border fence is not explicitly mentioned in Senior General Min Aung Hlaing's website report on the first of the three Tatmadaw funding ceremonies on 1 September 2017, the wording on a banner hung during the second ceremony infers that the fence may have been mentioned during this first ceremony. A translation of the banner is as follows: "Second ceremony to present cash and kind to Security forces, departmental staff who risked their lives for national security and defence duties in Rakhine State, and the displaced natives who had to leave their homes due to the violent attacks of the ARSA extremist Bengali terrorists; and to erect the border fence." concerning the purpose of the barrier fence. There, the fence is 200 metres from the border, inside Myanmar territory, and surrounds the IDP Rohingya population, preventing them from accessing their villages and homes.³²² There have been daily loudspeaker announcements, directed at the IDP Rohingya population from the Myanmar side of the fence, broadcasting calls that the Rohingya are there illegally.³²³ Fourth, the re-inforcement of the barrier fence was done in the context of a number of other projects implemented and actions taken by the Tatmadaw, including the destruction of Rohingya villages that have the effect of preventing the Rohingya from returning to their homes. These are elaborated on in the section below and reaffirm the purpose of the barrier fence.

134. The financial assistance that KBZ Group and Max Myanmar officials provided towards the construction of the fence was substantial. KBZ Group donated USD 2.2 million through UEHRD to build a section of the fence.³²⁴ It also donated USD 2,477,857³²⁵ to the Tatmadaw Commander-in-Chief, Senior General Min Aung Hlaing on 1 September 2017³²⁶ and on 10 September 2017.³²⁷ Max Myanmar donated USD 654,000³²⁸ to the UEHRD during a fundraising ceremony at which the State Counsellor spoke about improving the border fence.³²⁹ It donated USD 976,857³³⁰ to Tatmadaw Commander-in-Chief Min Aung Hlaing on 1 September 2017³³¹ and following a ceremony on 21 September 2017.³³²

135. As noted above in the legal framework section, providing financial support to an organization directly committing crimes is sufficient for the contribution to be deemed substantial. KBZ Group and Max Myanmar, the two companies that the Mission identified as specifically funding the building of the fence, provided funds to the direct perpetrators, the Tatmadaw and civilian leaders, who needed money to build a barrier fence, which secured and consolidated the deportation of the Rohingya people from their homeland in northern Rakhine State and played an integral part in the inhumane act of preventing Rohingya from accessing their homeland. Therefore, they made a substantial contribution to the crime. In addition, the Mission has evidence that officials of KBZ Group and Max Myanmar were aware that the fence and other measures described in the fundraising ceremonies and in the UEHRD would contribute to the inhumane act of preventing the Rohingya from accessing their homes and property. This was evident by the repeated public hate-filled rhetoric of Tatmadaw Commander-in-Chief Senior General Min Aung Hlaing directed against the Rohingya people as a whole and his references to the “Bengali problem”.³³³ Nyo Myint, senior managing director of KBZ Group, demonstrated his awareness of the purpose of the fence when he told a journalist that his donation towards the fence was meant to contribute to preventing illegal migration.³³⁴ As previously explained, the Mission has determined that reference to illegal migration is indicative of the pervasive climate of hatred and contempt toward the Rohingya and a false narrative propagated to breed hatred against the Rohingya.³³⁵

136. For these reasons, the Mission concludes on reasonable grounds that officials from KBZ Group and Max Myanmar aided, abetted, or otherwise assisted in the crimes against humanity of persecution and other inhumane acts. It is now the responsibility of the Myanmar Government or, failing action by the Myanmar Government, other justice systems with jurisdiction to investigate and, if there is sufficient evidence, prosecute those officials for crimes under international law. The Mission also has reasonable grounds to conclude that a criminal investigation should be undertaken to determine if those and other company officials are responsible for crimes under international law for their involvement in the implementation of UEHRD and Tatmadaw measures other than the re-enforcement of the barrier fence that also caused great suffering by preventing the Rohingya from returning to their homes and communities. This includes, among others, Asia World Group and Eden Group.

(b) Liability of company officials for donations to Tatmadaw fundraising ceremonies

137. The Mission has reasonable grounds to conclude that a criminal investigation should be undertaken to determine if company officials additional to those from KBZ Group and Max Myanmar are responsible for crimes under international law arising from their financial contributions at the Tatmadaw's three funding ceremonies. As stated by Senior General Min Aung Hlaing, the funds raised during these ceremonies were needed for the express purpose of continuing the "area clearance operations" and finishing the "Bengali problem".³³⁶ In addition to the construction of the barrier fence, the donations were intended to support "security troops and departmental personnel discharging [sic] State defence and security duties at risk of sacrifice in Rakhine State".³³⁷ This description makes it clear that the Tatmadaw would direct the donations for Tatmadaw activities in support of their "clearance operations" in northern Rakhine State.

138. The context in which the fundraising ceremonies were taking place is crucial to understanding the purpose of the projects funded and the knowledge or awareness of the donors. Following the violence that began on 25 August 2017 and the expulsion of over 700,000 people³³⁸, the Tatmadaw continued to engage in serious violations of international law in northern Rakhine State by destroying Rohingya villages, bulldozing partially destroyed homes, and clearing previously occupied land. Based on a review of satellite imagery, the Mission assessed that 20 per cent of the total destruction in northern Rakhine occurred after 16 September 2017, affecting more than 7,000 structures, and other destruction continued at least until March 2018.³³⁹

139. The ceremonies took place while mass atrocities including extermination and mass displacement of the Rohingya people, were still occurring. This timing, combined with Senior General Min Aung Hlaing's hateful rhetoric during the ceremonies directed towards the entire Rohingya population, provides reasonable grounds for the Mission to conclude that those attending and making donations at the Tatmadaw's funding ceremonies were aware of the likelihood that their donations would substantially contribute to ensuring the Rohingya population cannot return to their villages and communities. This is especially true in the context of the extremely close relationship between the Tatmadaw and many of the donors, who included current and former Tatmadaw members and their relatives.³⁴⁰

140. The amount of financial support received by Senior General Min Aung Hlaing during these funding ceremonies was significant (USD 10.2 million) and contributed in a meaningful way to the Tatmadaw's continuing operations in northern Rakhine State. Through their donations, these companies and their officials, supported and facilitated the "clearance operations” that entailed a number of crimes under international law. For these reasons, the Mission has reasonable grounds to conclude that a criminal investigation should be undertaken to determine if donors who made donations made at the Tatmadaw’s funding ceremonies incur international criminal liability. Annex IV of this report provides a list of companies and other actors known to have made donations at those ceremonies.³⁴¹

B. MEHL and MEC joint ventures and commercial partnerships with foreign companies and foreign State-owned enterprises

141. Partnerships with foreign companies and foreign State-owned enterprises facilitate the Tatmadaw’s reach in diverse industries across Myanmar. The Mission identified 15 foreign companies that it concluded on reasonable grounds have maintained or entered into joint ventures with MEHL, MEC or one of their subsidiaries.³⁴² These foreign companies are involved in manufacturing, construction and real estate development, tobacco, arts, entertainment and recreation, mining and quarrying, and in the information and communication sectors.³⁴³ The Mission identified another 44 foreign companies that it concluded on reasonable grounds have had other types of relationships with MEHL, MEC, and their subsidiaries either through contractual or other commercial ties.³⁴⁴

142. The nature of the relationships is illustrated by MEHL’s partnership with Wanbao Mining Ltd., a wholly owned subsidiary of China North Industries Corporation (NORINCO), a Chinese State-owned enterprise, in Myanmar’s two largest two copper mines in Sagaing State. Wanbao Mining Ltd. operates the Monywa Letpadaung copper mine through its wholly owned subsidiary Myanmar Wanboa Mining Copper Ltd. According to the terms of the mining concession, Myanmar’s State-owned Mining Enterprise 1 (ME1) is entitled to 51 per cent of the profits from Letpadaung, Myanmar Wanbao Mining Copper Ltd. is entitled to 30 per cent of the profits, and MEHL is entitled to 29 per cent of the profits.³⁴⁵ Wanbao Mining Ltd. also operates the Sabai Mountain and Kyay Sin Mountain (S&K) Mine through its wholly owned subsidiary Myanmar Yang Tse Copper Ltd, with MEHL entitled to 51 per cent of profits and Myanmar Yang Tse Copper Ltd. entitled to 49 per cent of profits.³⁴⁶

143. The Mission was able to identify 15 foreign companies that have joint ventures with Tatmadaw conglomerates. In some joint ventures, foreign companies invest in MEHL or MEC companies, in exchange for equity. In others, foreign companies and MEHL or MEC companies jointly form new business enterprises. In the extractive sector, MEHL or MEC provide a license or permit and take a share in the joint venture. The joint venture partners have provided investment capital and have been responsible for running the business.³⁴⁷ Some joint ventures between foreign companies and Tatmadaw conglomerates are transparent, such as the 70 per cent stake of Posco Steel Co., Ltd., a South Korean steel company, in Myanmar Posco Steel Company Ltd., a MEHL company.³⁴⁸ Other business partnerships are traceable through corporate structures and leadership. For example, the Mission has documented a commercial partnership between Thilawa Cement and Building Materials Ltd. and Sinminn

Cement, a MEHL subsidiary.³⁴⁹ Thilawa Cement and Building Materials Ltd., according to corporate filings, is listed as being owned by Lafarge,³⁵⁰ which since 2015 merged into LafargeHolcim, a French-Swiss company and the world's largest cement manufacturer.³⁵¹ According to corporate records, Thilawa Cement and Building Materials Ltd., and SinMinn Cement, the MEHL subsidiary, share board leadership.³⁵²

144. Other foreign companies are engaged with MEHL, MEC and their subsidiaries more directly, paying Tatmadaw conglomerates for the use of their property. A stark example is that of Adani Group, of India, which is leasing land in Yangon from MEC for 50 years for USD 290 million for the construction of Ahlone International Port Terminal 2.³⁵³ The Mission has been unable to establish the origin of MEC's ownership of this land. Other examples³⁵⁴ raise serious concerns that foreign companies are leasing MEHL, MEC or Tatmadaw-owned property for significant sums, without facing due scrutiny as to how their payments are benefitting the Tatmadaw.

1. Legal and policy findings

145. The Mission finds that any foreign business activity involving the Tatmadaw and its conglomerates MEHL and MEC poses a high risk of contributing to, or being linked to, violations of human rights law and international humanitarian law. At a minimum, these foreign companies are contributing to supporting the Tatmadaw's financial capacity.

146. Given this situation, the absence of security sector reform and the persistent lack of accountability documented in its 2018 report, the Mission concludes on reasonable grounds that the activities of these foreign companies and foreign SOEs dealing with the Tatmadaw and its conglomerates have a reasonably foreseeable adverse impact on the situation of human rights in relation to Myanmar. States hosting these foreign companies and SOEs therefore have a heightened duty to take appropriate legislative and other measures to ensure that the companies' and SOEs' activities are consistent with the State's human rights obligations and responsibilities. The Mission similarly concludes that foreign companies and SOEs involved with the Tatmadaw and its conglomerates MEHL and MEC should sever their relationships with these enterprises in light of the information presented in this report and should ensure that they are fulfilling their corporate responsibility to respect human rights. Those in commercial relationships with MEHL or MEC may find themselves complicit, in law, fact or the eyes of the broader public, in contributing to the resources available to the Tatmadaw to continue its involvement in gross violations of international human rights law and serious violations of international humanitarian law. This report puts companies on further and effective notice of the human rights implications that arise from maintaining business connections with the Tatmadaw.

C. Arms and military equipment suppliers

147. As a result of the Mission's findings that there are reasonable grounds to conclude that the Tatmadaw has been directly involved in gross violations of human rights law and serious violations of international humanitarian law, as well as acts of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes, the Mission recommended that States should not authorize the transfer of arms to Myanmar, considering States' knowledge that they would be used to commit such crimes, or, at a minimum, the overriding risk that the arms would undermine peace and security or be used to commit or facilitate the commission of further serious crimes under international law.³⁵⁵

148. A considerable number of States – including the United States,³⁵⁶ the 28 member countries of the European Union,³⁵⁷ Canada³⁵⁸ and Australia³⁵⁹ – have long-standing arms embargoes in place against Myanmar. Some have taken steps in the aftermath of the “clearance operations” that began in August 2017 to widen the scope of their restrictive measures. For instance, in February 2018, the European Union Council, expanded its arms embargo on Myanmar, which already covered arms, munitions and military equipment, to prohibit also the export of dual-use goods for military and Border Guard Police use, and restrict the export of equipment for monitoring communications, as well as military training and cooperation.³⁶⁰

149. The Mission reaffirms its recommendation against the transfer of arms to Myanmar. The Tatmadaw has orchestrated and promoted the perpetration of violations of international law in various parts of Myanmar over many years and has done so in a climate of near total impunity. The Tatmadaw's strong and unified military command structure, over which its most senior generals preside, is largely responsible for these violations. Given these circumstances, and the Tatmadaw's use of weapons, military vehicles, navy vessels and aircraft in the commission of these violations, the Mission has examined the sources of the Tatmadaw's arms and other equipment.

150. In analysing the sale of arms and related equipment to the Tatmadaw, the Mission focused its investigation on information concerning deliveries and orders since 2016.³⁶¹ During this period, especially after November 2016, States and foreign companies, including foreign SOEs, knew or ought to have known that Myanmar security forces, including the Tatmadaw, were responsible for gross violations of human rights law in northern Rakhine State. In confirmation of this, in at least one domestic jurisdiction, a petition was filed in early 2017 that successfully blocked the delivery of military equipment to the Tatmadaw on the basis of the events in October 2016 in northern Rakhine.³⁶²

151. As the situation deteriorated from October 2016, it became a matter of the public record that United Nations humanitarian agencies were blocked from delivering aid.³⁶³ Myanmar's security forces were accused of undertaking a "scorched earth" policy.³⁶⁴ In March 2017, the UN Human Rights Council adopted resolution 34/22, noting the seriousness of the allegations contained in a "flash report" released by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.³⁶⁵ In November 2017, the Security Council issued a presidential statement calling on Myanmar to end excessive military force and intercommunal violence in Rakhine State.³⁶⁶ The widespread public condemnation of the conduct of Myanmar's security forces, the response in international fora and the extent of international media coverage of highly traumatized civilians cannot have escaped the attention of States. They must have had knowledge and notice that the Tatmadaw was engaging in serious violations of international human rights law and, where applicable, international humanitarian law.

152. Since August 2017, the Tatmadaw's "clearance operations" and allegations of serious human rights violations were contemporaneously reported, almost in real-time, by the international press and known throughout the world.³⁶⁷ The Mission's September 2018 report also received widespread international and domestic attention. The Mission reported to the General Assembly in October 2018. It was also invited to brief the UN Security Council in October 2018, where some of those States, including the Russian Federation and China, made statements indicating their awareness of the situation in northern Rakhine State.³⁶⁸

153. Additionally, public reports documenting the human rights crisis in Myanmar contain credible information about the types of weapons and related equipment that the Tatmadaw and other security forces had used in their commission of violations of international law. Myanmar security forces used helicopters, rifles, grenades, and RPGs against the Rohingya during the attacks that began in October 2016.³⁶⁹ As reported in the Mission's 2018 report, witnesses in Dar Gyi Zar saw the arrival of two or three helicopters on 12 November 2016 from which soldiers opened fire using automatic weapons.³⁷⁰ Shooting from the helicopters continued for up to two hours. At least one woman was shot and killed inside her house and witnesses saw up to 15 other bodies of people killed by gunfire from the helicopters.³⁷¹ The Mission collected information reporting that on or around 14 December 2016, Nam Ha village in Muse Township, Shan State, was attacked, both by mortar shelling and airstrikes by four jet fighter planes. The village was composed of nearly a hundred households and had a population of over 500 villagers, with the Mission receiving information that no members of EAOs were present during the attacks and with no other military assets in the village.³⁷² The military units involved in the clearance operations that began on 25 August 2017 in northern Rakhine State resulting in gross violations of international human rights law and serious violations of international humanitarian law were armed with 60 tanks and armoured personnel carriers.³⁷³ Victims who spoke to the Mission described attackers using a hand-held or shoulder-mounted weapon. Some also described weapons fixed to the ground using some sort of support. Victims were most likely describing a portable anti-armour weapon such as an RPG-7 (rocket propelled grenade launcher) or the M-3 Carl Gustav recoilless rifle, both of which are used by the Tatmadaw and match the description in terms of both use and results.³⁷⁴ Eight MI-17 helicopters were also relocated to Rakhine State, and may have been among the helicopters identified as those used in the clearance operations.³⁷⁵ At least one navy vessel fired upon a Rohingya village from the Bay of Bengal.³⁷⁶ The Mission also reported aerial bombings and artillery fire in Tanai, Kachin State, between November 2017 and April 2018 that appeared inconsistent with the rules of international humanitarian law.³⁷⁷

154. The Mission has identified several companies supplying similar equipment and support, including fighter planes, maintenance and upgrades to helicopters, surface-to-surface ballistic missile systems, armoured personnel carriers and artillery systems, small arms and materiel, to the Tatmadaw. Of 14 companies identified as having supplied military equipment to the Tatmadaw since 2016, 12 are foreign SOEs. The Mission identified SOEs of China, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, India, Russia, and Ukraine involved in major arms or arms-related deals with Myanmar. Israel also exported arms to Myanmar before an order of its Supreme Court prohibited further sales.³⁷⁸

155. Since 2016, the Myanmar Air Force has received 12 Yakovlev Yak-130 jet trainers from the Russian Federation State-owned Irkutsk Corporation, a subsidiary of the United Aircraft Corporation.³⁷⁹ In October 2017, four of the Myanmar Air Force's Mil Mi-24P helicopter gunships were serviced by the Russian Federation State-owned defence company Rostec, and four Mil Mi-35 helicopters were upgraded with new technology.³⁸⁰ In January 2018, Myanmar and Russia agreed on the sale of six Sukhoi SU-30 multi-role fighter jets in a contract reportedly worth about USD 204 million.³⁸¹ The fighter planes are also produced by the State-owned Irkutsk Corporation. In January 2018, the Tatmadaw carried out airstrikes in Tanai, Kachin State, in which civilians were killed and property was destroyed, causing displacement and destruction of livelihoods.³⁸² The Mission received credible reports that the Tatmadaw used Mil Mi-35 helicopter gunships in the attack.³⁸³

156. Media reports of statements from government officials provided the Mission with general and specific confirmation of several of these transfers. They also made it clear that the equipment had been or would be used in contexts—namely counter-insurgency and counterterrorism operations—in which the Tatmadaw was notorious for committing violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law. In early 2018, Russian Federation Deputy Defence Minister Alexander Fomin was publicly quoted as saying the fighter planes would “become the main fighter aircraft of Myanmar’s air force to protect the country’s territorial integrity and repel any terror threats.”³⁸⁴ At a press conference following the 8th Moscow Conference on International Security in April 2019, Commander-in-Chief Senior General Min Aung Hlaing said that Russia’s military hardware was “very useful” for his military in key locations in Myanmar.³⁸⁵ The State-owned newspaper Global New Light of Myanmar also reported that a military delegation led by Commander-in-Chief Senior General Min Aung Hlaing visited the Irkutsk Aviation Plant on 23 April 2019.³⁸⁶

157. In addition to the credible reports and high profile attention at the United Nations given to the Myanmar human rights crisis described in paragraph 152 above, Russia also knew or ought to have known from the acts of other States about the adverse international human rights law and international humanitarian law consequences its arms transfers would have. This includes the arms embargoes imposed by numerous other governments, many of which were maintained or widened in reaction to widespread violence and human rights violations by the military and other security forces against minority groups in Rakhine, Kachin and Shan States.³⁸⁷

158. The Mission’s investigation also found arms transfers arriving from China. In May 2017, it was reported that the Tatmadaw was acquiring SY-400 short-range precision surface-to-surface ballistic missile systems, manufactured by the China State-owned China

³⁸⁷ See paragraph 148. For example, in February 2018, the EU Council condemned widespread, systematic grave human rights violations committed by the Myanmar military and other security forces. It confirmed the relevance of the existing embargo and on 26 April 2018 it expanded the restrictive measures on Myanmar with a prohibition on the export of dual-use goods for military and Border Guard Police end users, restrictions on the export of equipment for monitoring communications that might be used for internal repression, and on military training and military cooperation. Aerospace Science and Industry Corporation.³⁸⁸ In November 2018, the Tatmadaw Air Force received its first six JF-17M “Thunder” combat aircraft out of a total of 16 aircraft ordered in 2015 on a USD 560 million contract with the Chinese State-owned Aviation Industry Corporation of China (AVIC).³⁸⁹ Senior General Min Aung Hlaing confirmed Chinese weapon transfers to Myanmar in the past and indicated that the relationship continued in 2019. During a visit to Beijing on 10 April 2019, he was reported in the media as saying that the “Myanmar army is unavoidably relying on the People’s Liberation Army... for weapons procurement,” and thanking China for “its correct stance and standing against the international community over the Rakhine State issue.”³⁹⁰

159. In February 2018, the UN Panel of Experts established pursuant to resolution 1874 (2009) in relation to sanctions on the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea reported that a Member State had notified the Panel “of evidence of the receipt by Myanmar of ballistic missile systems from the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea in addition to a range of conventional weapons, including multiple rocket launchers and surface-to-air missiles” and that “personnel of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea had been dispatched to Directorate for Defence Industries-operated facilities in Myanmar”.³⁹¹ This appears to have been done through Korea Mining Development Trading Corporation (KOMID).³⁹² In the context of reporting that Myanmar maintains a sophisticated global procurement network through its Directorate for Defence Industries, the Panel also noted that a Member State reported that the Directorate’s director, Tun Hlaing, “had reportedly been involved in overseas procurements and was associated with at least two Singapore-based firms, Excellence Metal Casting and STE Global Trading Pte Ltd.”³⁹³ The Panel did not provide specifics on the types of items Myanmar may have procured from these companies.

160. The Mission also found that Ukraine is supporting the Tatmadaw’s military infrastructure and production capabilities. In March 2019, it was reported that Ukraine State-owned Ukrspetsexport and Ukroboronprom had begun implementing an arms manufacturing deal to build a plant in Myanmar to manufacture armoured personnel carriers and self-propelled howitzers, notably the BTR-4U wheeled 8×8 armoured personnel carrier and the 2S1U self-propelled howitzer.³⁹⁴ Ukrspetsexport was reported to have confirmed an initial delivery of equipment and machinery for the plant, which is scheduled to begin production by 2020.³⁹⁵

161. India’s State-owned defence manufacturers have also supplied the Tatmadaw. Hindustan Aeronautics Limited (HAL) delivered second-hand trainer aircraft in 2018 as aid,³⁹⁶ and Bharat Dynamics Limited provided anti-submarine torpedoes to the Myanmar Navy following an agreement reached in March 2017, reportedly worth USD 38 million.³⁹⁷ This agreement followed a visit by the Chief of Naval Staff of the Indian Navy to Myanmar in November 2016.³⁹⁸ The official press release announcing the visit stated that India was providing assistance to the Myanmar Navy through military hardware and equipment, with the objective of bolstering its capacity.³⁹⁹

162. In April 2017, Israel Aerospace Industries, an Israeli State-owned enterprise, delivered two attack frigates to the Tatmadaw Navy.⁴⁰⁰ This delivery followed the filing of a petition before the Israeli Supreme Court in early 2017 seeking a prohibition on implementation of a defence cooperation agreement signed between Israel and Myanmar on the basis of the conduct of the Tatmadaw in northern Rakhine in October 2016. As a result of a subsequent decision by the Israeli Supreme Court, military export licenses were revoked and there has been no further defence cooperation.⁴⁰¹

163. Privately-owned arms manufacturing companies have also sold arms and provided military training to the Tatmadaw. In October 2016, an Israeli military and police equipment and training company TAR Ideal Concepts, posted photographs on its website of its personnel training the Tatmadaw Special Operations Taskforce.⁴⁰² In November 2018, a media statement by an official from the Philippine-based company, Armscor International, announced that it had sold competition handguns to the Tatmadaw Shooting Team, and was exploring how to further penetrate the Myanmar defence market, noting that “there are a number of security agencies in Myanmar that are interested in new defence products.”⁴⁰³

164. In addition to military equipment and other support supplied by these identified sources, the Tatmadaw purchases arms and equipment through third parties that masks their origins. According to the SIPRI Arms Transfers Database, in 2016, the Tatmadaw purchased second-hand light helicopters from unknown sources.⁴⁰⁴ According to an eyewitness, in the weeks prior to the clearance operations that began on 25 August 2017, light helicopters identified as Bell 206 or 212 helicopters (capacity of 8 to 10 persons) frequently flew into northern Rakhine, many to No. 1 BGP Headquarters in Kyee Kan Pyin, Maungdaw.⁴⁰⁵ Bell 206 or 212 helicopters are light aircraft, which are often used to transport troops.

165. In addition to procuring arms, military equipment and arms manufacturing capacity, the Tatmadaw has sought to procure information and communications technology from at least seven foreign companies since 2016, under the official Ministry of Defence budget.⁴⁰⁶ These have included unmanned aerial vehicles, military air-traffic control systems, internet and cloud-based platforms and connectivity services, telecommunications technology, cameras, radio transceivers for ground-to-air communications, and precision navigation systems.⁴⁰⁷ These dual-use technologies, when exported from inside the European Union, would be subject to the EU controls on the exports of military technology and equipment,⁴⁰⁸ as the recipient and end-user of the goods would be the Tatmadaw, the armed forces of the recipient country.⁴⁰⁹ These goods and technologies may also be subject to other export controls, as prescribed by the Wassenaar Arrangement on Export Controls for Conventional Arms and Dual-Use Goods and Technologies.⁴¹⁰ According to the Myanmar defence budget, the Tatmadaw has sought to procure these goods and technology from companies in several Wassenaar Arrangement countries, including Austria, Canada, Japan, Norway, South Africa, and the United Kingdom.

1. Legal findings

166. International law provides various legal frameworks that regulate weapons and other equipment transfers from State to State, aiming to prevent the types of violations the Mission has documented in Myanmar. Under international human rights law, State parties to the ICCPR must take appropriate legislative and other measures to ensure that all activities taking place in whole or in part within their territory or under their jurisdiction, but having a direct and reasonably foreseeable impact on the right to life of individuals outside their territory, are consistent with the right to life and with the right of victims to obtain an effective remedy.⁴¹¹

167. The Mission finds reasonable grounds to conclude that China, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, India, Israel, Philippines, Russia, and Ukraine allowed the arms and arms-related transfers and assistance to Myanmar. Based on the types of items and assistance provided, China, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Israel, Russia, and Ukraine knew or ought to have known that doing so would have a direct and reasonably foreseeable adverse impact on the human rights of people in Myanmar. This is contrary to the ICCPR, to which the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Israel, Russia, and Ukraine are all State parties. China is a signatory. By implication, these countries also failed to effectively apply human rights due diligence to the transfers. Given the totality of the circumstances, the Mission is also of the view that India and the Philippines should not have permitted the transfer of arms and related items to the Tatmadaw. Further investigation is required with respect to the nature of arms or related items that Myanmar may have procured from two businesses based in Singapore, which is not a party or a signatory to the ICCPR.

168. The Mission similarly concludes that China, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Israel, Russia, and Ukraine failed to refrain from transferring weapons although they expected or ought to have expected, based on the facts or their knowledge of past patterns of the Tatmadaw, that the weapons would be used in acts that violate international human rights law and international humanitarian law.⁴¹²

169. For this reason, these States provided arms and other related equipment in breach of their Common Article 1 obligations as a matter either of treaty law or of customary international humanitarian law. The Mission also reached the conclusion under the general rules of State responsibility that prohibit aiding or assisting another State in the commission of an internationally wrongful act, that these States knew, or were virtually certain, that the assistance would be used for unlawful purposes. Although the Mission did not have enough information to conclude that an unlawful act did actually occur, the gravity of this finding is aggravated by the fact that the Tatmadaw has engaged in “serious breaches”, which prohibits States from rendering aid or assistance in maintaining the situation (even if the breach has ceased) that arose from those breaches. As noted above, given the totality of the circumstances, the Mission is also of the view that India and the Philippines should not have permitted the transfer of arms and related items to the Tatmadaw. Further investigation is required with respect to the application of these rules to Singapore.

170. The Mission also draws legal findings from international arms trade law. Since October 2016, Israel, the Philippines, and Ukraine, all signatories to the ATT, have allowed the transfer or enabled the assembly of conventional arms and other items covered by the Arms Trade Treaty, namely armoured combat vehicles and battle tanks,⁴¹³ small arms and light weapons⁴¹⁴, and warships⁴¹⁵. As signatories, they are obliged to refrain from acts contrary to the object and purpose of the treaty, which include establishing the highest possible common international standards for regulating or improving the regulation of the international trade in conventional arms for the purpose of reducing human suffering. This is principally manifested in the ATT’s core obligations found in Articles 6 and 7, which aim to ensure that arms do not end up in the hands of those who would use them to commit serious violations of international human rights law or international humanitarian law.⁴¹⁶ Despite this, Israel in particular allowed the transfer of arms covered by the ATT at a time when it had knowledge, or ought to have had knowledge, that they would be used in the commission of serious crimes under international law. Further investigation is required with respect to the transfer and any prospective sales of small arms or other items from the Philippines as well as the nature of arms or related items that Myanmar may have procured from two businesses based in Singapore, which is a signatory to the ATT.

171. Ukraine as a signatory to the ATT must also not engage in acts or omissions that defeat the treaty’s object and purpose. The ATT covers “parts and components where the export is in a form that provides the capability to assemble the conventional arms”.⁴¹⁷ Despite this, the Ukraine state-owned Ukrspetsexport and Ukroboronprom factory agreed to provide the capacity to assemble conventional arms, in this case armoured personnel carriers and self-propelled howitzers, in a manner that would place those arms into the hands of the Myanmar government at a time when Ukraine had knowledge, or ought to have had knowledge, that they would be used in the commission of serious violations of international law. While the ATT does not specifically cover the building of arms factories in another State, a good faith interpretation of the treaty should preclude activities that circumvent the treaty’s Article 6 prohibition by building an arms factory in a State to which Ukraine would otherwise be prohibited from transferring arms.⁴¹⁸ The building of an arms factory in Myanmar would provide a sustainable source of conventional arms that the treaty otherwise regulates. For these reasons, the Mission concludes on reasonable grounds and through a good faith interpretation of the ATT that the Ukrspetsexport and Ukroboronprom arms factory in Myanmar defeats the object and purpose of the ATT.

172. Article 7, which covers due diligence and mitigation efforts, applies to the export of conventional arms and related items that are not prohibited under Article 6. Under Article 7, signatories (due to their obligation not to defeat the object and purpose of the treaty) and States Parties (due to their binding obligations under the treaty) must assess the potential for exports to contribute to, inter alia, undermining peace and security or be used to commit or facilitate a serious violation of international human rights law or international humanitarian law. The exporting signatory or State Party must also consider whether there are measures that could be undertaken to mitigate those risks and it must not authorize the export if there is an overriding risk of any of those negative consequences occurring. The exporting State's assessment must also take into account the risk of the covered export being used to commit or facilitate serious acts of gender-based violence or serious acts of violence against women and children, all of which have occurred in the Myanmar context.

173. Having found that Israel and Ukraine should not have transferred or enabled the assembly of conventional arms, the Mission need not evaluate whether Israel and Ukraine undertook an effective assessment equivalent to Article 7. Nonetheless, the Mission is of the view that an overriding risk existed and, for that additional reason, the items should not have been exported.

174. In addition to the obligations on States to regulate arms transfers, the Mission has reasonable grounds to conclude that, due to widespread knowledge of the Tatmadaw's abhorrent human rights record, arms transferring businesses in China, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Israel, Russia, and Ukraine should not have permitted the transfers. The Mission reminds these businesses that they should effectively apply relevant international human rights principles in line with their corporate responsibility to respect human rights. Businesses involved in the sale of arms and dual-use goods (see paras. 175-176 below) should also carry out effective human rights due diligence to determine whether they can put in place preventive or mitigation measures (such as restrictions on where and how the equipment could be used) and, if not, should decline making the sale. Given the totality of the circumstances, the Mission is also of the view that India and Philippines-based businesses should not have permitted the transfer of arms and related items to the Tatmadaw. Further investigation is needed into the nature of arms or related items that Myanmar may have procured from two businesses based in Singapore.

175. The Mission also takes note of at least seven companies from which, since 2016, the Tatmadaw sought to procure information and communications technology. Moreover, as the EU control of exports of military technology and equipment⁴¹⁹ makes clear, dual-use goods and technology, for which there are serious grounds for believing that their end-user will be the armed forces or internal security forces or similar entities in the recipient country, are considered, for the purposes of export control, as military technology or equipment.⁴²⁰ The inclusion of information and communications technology from identified companies on the Myanmar Ministry of Defence military budget makes clear that the recipient and end-user of the goods and technology would be the Tatmadaw. Austria and the United Kingdom, which are listed as potential sources of such goods and technologies in the Tatmadaw's budget, are subject to EU export control rules.

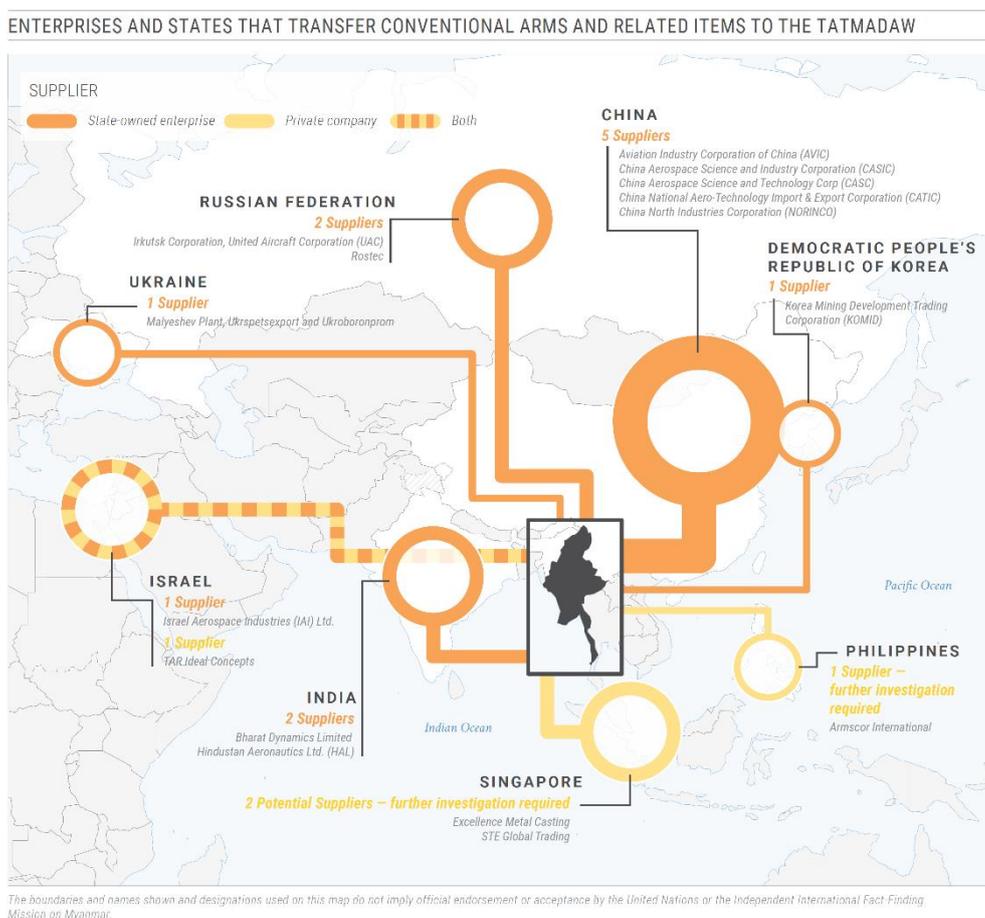

176. In addition, the Wassenaar Arrangement on Export Controls list of dual-use goods and technologies includes information security technology; target acquisition, designation, range-finding, surveillance or tracking systems; cameras; and software, all of which the Tatmadaw appears to have sought to procure since 2016 under the official Ministry of Defence budget.⁴²¹ Wassenaar Arrangement participating States are expected to apply export controls to all items on its list of dual-use goods and technologies.⁴²² Austria, Canada, Japan, Norway, South Africa, and the United Kingdom, are all participating States in the Wassenaar Arrangement.

VI. Conclusions and recommendations

177. In its September 2018 report, the Mission found that the Tatmadaw and forces under its control were responsible for the majority of violations and crimes committed in Kachin, Shan and Rakhine State, as documented by the Mission.⁴²³ The Mission recommended that a political, constitutional and legislative reform process transform the place, role and power of the Tatmadaw and other security forces, including through removing military prerogatives in politics and the economy.⁴²⁴

178. This report, on the economic interests of the Tatmadaw, further substantiates that recommendation, illustrating how the Tatmadaw uses its web of commercial interests, established through military-linked companies and subsidiaries, relationships with State-owned enterprises and private crony companies, to secure financial resources to support its activities and personnel. In doing so, the Tatmadaw insulates itself from accountability and oversight. Through controlling its own business empire, the Tatmadaw can evade the accountability and oversight that normally arise from civilian oversight of military budgets.

179. In addition, this report has begun to illuminate the role that other corporate actors play in contributing to or benefiting from the human rights and international humanitarian law violations of the Tatmadaw. Foreign companies with joint ventures and other commercial relationships with the Tatmadaw, Myanmar business donors to the Tatmadaw's operations, and arms suppliers are in some cases legally implicated in the conduct of the Tatmadaw, and in all cases complicit through their tacit acceptance and approval of the Tatmadaw's actions. This conclusion is most notable in northern Rakhine, where private businesses are assisting the implementation of the inhumane and discriminatory policies of the Tatmadaw specifically and the government as a whole under the guise of economic development and reconstruction.

180. In this report, the Mission has concluded on reasonable grounds that:

- a. Two Tatmadaw conglomerates, Myanmar Economic Holdings Limited (MEHL) and Myanmar Economic Corporation (MEC), are owned and influenced by senior Tatmadaw leaders, including the Commander-in-Chief Senior General Min Aung Hlaing and the Deputy Commander-in-Chief Vice Senior General Soe Win, responsible for gross violations of international human rights law and serious violations of international humanitarian law. The Mission identified 120 MEHL and MEC owned businesses across diverse sectors of the economy – from construction and gem extraction to manufacturing, insurance, tourism and banking, and a further 27 businesses that are closely affiliated with the MEHL and MEC through corporate structures. The revenue that these military businesses generate strengthens the Tatmadaw's autonomy from elected civilian oversight and provides financial support for the Tatmadaw's operations with their wide array of international human rights and humanitarian law violations.

There are strong and persistent business and familial links between the Tatmadaw, its conglomerates MEHL and MEC, and a number of private Myanmar companies and conglomerates, colloquially known as “crony companies”.

- b. Human rights and international humanitarian law violations, including forced labour and sexual violence, have been perpetrated by the Tatmadaw in mining areas, particularly in Kachin State, in connection with their business activities. MEHL and MEC and 26 of their identified subsidiaries have numerous licenses for jade and ruby mining in Kachin and Shan States.
- c. At least 45 companies and organizations provided the Tatmadaw with USD 10.2 million in financial donations that were solicited in September 2017 by senior Tatmadaw leadership in support of the “clearance operations” that began in August 2017 against the Rohingya in northern Rakhine. The Mission also found that private companies with enduring links to the Tatmadaw are financing development projects in northern Rakhine in furtherance of the Tatmadaw's objective of re-engineering the region in a way that erases evidence of Rohingya belonging in Myanmar, and preventing their return to access their homeland and communities. These projects, carried out under the Union Enterprise for Humanitarian Assistance, Resettlement and Development in Rakhine (UEHRD) consolidate the consequences of war crimes, crimes against humanity and acts of genocide.⁴²⁵ On the basis of these findings, the Mission has identified private companies with officials who may have made a substantial and direct contribution to the commission of crimes under international law, including the crime against humanity of “other inhumane acts” and persecution, warranting their criminal investigation.
- d. 15 foreign companies have joint ventures and at least 44 foreign companies have other forms of commercial ties with Tatmadaw businesses. Through such joint venture and commercial relationships, the Mission finds that any foreign business activity involving the Tatmadaw and its conglomerates MEHL and MEC poses a high risk of contributing to, or being linked to, violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law. At a minimum, these foreign companies are contributing to supporting the Tatmadaw's financial capacity.

- e. At least 14 foreign companies from seven States have provided arms and related equipment to the Tatmadaw since 2016, after the Tatmadaw's dismal human rights record was widely and publicly known. Moreover, the public record made it clear that the Tatmadaw used many of the types of arms and related equipment that these entities were providing to commit gross violations of human rights and serious violations of international humanitarian law. Many of these companies and States therefore knew, or ought to have known, that their arms transfers could have a direct and reasonably foreseeable impact on the human rights situation in Myanmar. Among the arms suppliers identified by the Mission, 12 companies are State-owned enterprises.

The Mission also received credible information regarding seven foreign private companies from which the Tatmadaw has sought to procure dual-use goods and technology since 2016. The technology has included telecommunications services, tracking and precision systems, unmanned aerial vehicles, and internet and data transmission technology.⁴²⁶

181. The States and companies mentioned above are listed in the annexes to this report.

182. Removing the Tatmadaw from Myanmar's economy will entail two parallel approaches. The first is negative, and requires the economic isolation of and disengagement from Tatmadaw associated companies. This includes the above-mentioned economic interests, as outlined in the Mission's findings. The second approach is positive, and centres on the promotion of economic ties and engagement with non-Tatmadaw companies and businesses in Myanmar as a means of building and strengthening the non-Tatmadaw sector of the economy.

183. Implementing these two parallel approaches will erode the economic base of the Tatmadaw. This will undercut its ability to obstruct the reform process. It will also impair the Tatmadaw's ability to carry out its operations and thereby contribute to a reduction in violations of human rights and international humanitarian law. Finally, it will serve as a form of accountability in the short-term, ensuring that the Tatmadaw suffer the consequences – at least economically – of its actions.

184. At the same time, pursuing these two approaches in parallel will contribute to fostering the continued liberalization of Myanmar's economy, including its natural resource sector, albeit in an accountable way, contributing to equity and transparency, as well as greater economic growth for Myanmar's population.

185. To this end, the following recommendations set out a road map for the government of Myanmar, United Nations Security Council, Member States, relevant regional and international inter-governmental organizations, investors and businesses, international financial institutions, and the United Nations, its funds, programmes and agencies.

186. To the Government of Myanmar:

- a. Place the Tatmadaw fully under civilian control and oversight through the adoption of necessary laws and policies, including through the amendment of the Constitution;
- b. Following a full restructuring of the Tatmadaw, as well as an amended Constitution that ensures civilian control over the military, require parliamentary approval of all funding for the Tatmadaw and prohibit any income for the Tatmadaw that is not under parliamentary control. Consequently, remove the Tatmadaw from Myanmar's economic life, prohibiting it by law from engaging in any form of economic activity and prohibiting serving Tatmadaw officers from having a controlling interest in any economic ventures or sitting on the boards of economic enterprises;

⁴²⁶ See Annex VI. Arms and military equipment suppliers to the Tatmadaw.

- c. In the interim, implement measures ensuring that MEHL and MEC comply with all tax, accounting and financial rules, and fully disclose all information on their financial activities and operations, and those of their subsidiaries;
- d. Develop a robust policy and legislative framework that requires companies involved in natural resource extraction, including MEHL, MEC and their subsidiaries, to comply with financial reporting requirements and disclose details of beneficial ownership, in line with the government's commitments under the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative;
- e. Ensure no person or entity who has cooperated with the Mission is subject to reprisals, intimidation or any other form of harassment. Take all appropriate steps to prevent, investigate, punish and redress human rights violations through effective policies, legislation, regulations and adjudication of business related activities and require businesses to respect human rights, and periodically assess the adequacy of such laws and address any gaps; perform due diligence and provide effective guidance to businesses on how to respect human rights throughout their operations; and encourage and, where appropriate, require businesses to communicate how they address their human rights impacts of their operations.

186. To the Security Council:

- a. Impose targeted financial sanctions against senior officials of the Tatmadaw responsible for violations of international human rights law and violations of international humanitarian law;
- b. Impose targeted financial sanctions against all Tatmadaw-owned companies, especially MEHL, MEC and their subsidiaries, while respecting human rights and significantly mitigating any adverse socio-economic impact of sanctions;
- c. Impose a comprehensive arms embargo on Myanmar and establish a mechanism to monitor and enforce it.

187. To Member States, and relevant regional and international intergovernmental organisations:

- a. Implement targeted individual sanctions, including travel bans and asset freezes, against individuals publicly identified as perpetrators of violations of international human rights law and international humanitarian law by the Mission, as well as family members and associates of identified individuals, where they may act as surrogate business owners or be used as proxies by identified individuals to evade sanctions, while respecting human rights;
- b. Implement targeted individual sanctions and asset freezes against the owners of Tatmadaw conglomerates, and their subsidiary companies, while respecting human rights and significantly mitigating any adverse socio-economic impact of sanctions;
- c. Implement targeted sanctions against legal persons, entities or bodies contributing economically to or benefitting economically from the Tatmadaw and its operations as well as family members and associates of identified individuals, where they may act as surrogate business owners or be used as proxies by identified individuals to evade sanctions, while respecting human rights;
- d. Implement arms transfer sanctions, as an integral part of a coordinated multilateral approach to accountability, justice and ending the human rights crisis in Myanmar;
- e. Bring this report to the attention of any companies domiciled in their territory doing business in Myanmar;

- f. Take appropriate legislative and other measures to ensure that all business activities taking place in whole or in part within their territory or under their jurisdiction, and having a direct and reasonably foreseeable impact on the human rights of individuals in the context of the Myanmar human rights crisis, are consistent with their human rights obligations, including the right of victims to obtain an effective remedy;
- g. Support any individuals subjected to reprisals, or who would face the risk of reprisals, as a result of having cooperated with the Mission, especially where the State has a diplomatic presence in Myanmar or neighbouring countries;
- h. Exercise jurisdiction to extradite or investigate and, if there is sufficient evidence, prosecute officials of corporations where there are reasonable grounds to believe they participated in the commission of crimes under international law committed in relation to Myanmar's human rights crisis;
- i. Assist consumers to avoid dealing with MEHL, MEC and their subsidiaries and any other company owned or influenced by the Tatmadaw, including by identifying whether goods exported from Myanmar are produced, sold or exported without any association, directly or indirectly, with the Tatmadaw.

188. To investors and businesses:

- a. No business enterprise active in Myanmar or trading with or investing in businesses in Myanmar should enter into or remain in a business relationship of any kind with the security forces of Myanmar, in particular the Tatmadaw, or any enterprise owned or controlled by them (including subsidiaries) or their individual members, until and unless they are re-structured and transformed as recommended by the Mission. These enterprises include in particular MEHL and MEC and all of their subsidiaries and business relationships. Relevant business relationships include granting loans to these companies or investing capital into their operations and procuring services from Tatmadaw related companies (including real estate rental). With respect to companies owned or controlled by family members of Tatmadaw leaders, business enterprises should exercise extreme caution and only enter into such relationships if they have assured themselves after heightened due diligence, that it is a legitimate business not linked to or supporting the Tatmadaw. Businesses active in Myanmar or trading with or investing in businesses in Myanmar or considering doing so should use credible information, including this report, its list of companies in the Annexes (and any updated information as it becomes available), and the Mission's 2018 report when carrying out their due diligence assessments;
- b. Prohibit all contributions and donations to, and other funding of the Tatmadaw directly or through business relationships with Myanmar companies;
- c. Conduct all investment, including foreign investment, in conflict-affected areas, especially in Kachin, Shan, and Rakhine States, in line with the UN Guiding Principles for Business and Human Rights and subject all investments that are not already precluded from the recommendations above to heightened due diligence, given the Mission's findings;
- d. Any business enterprise purchasing natural resources from Myanmar highlighted in this report, and in particular, jade and rubies, and timber from Kachin and Shan States, should conduct heightened due diligence to ensure that the resources were not produced or sold by enterprises owned or influenced by the Tatmadaw (including subsidiaries and joint ventures) or individual members of the Tatmadaw. If so, they should not purchase or use, directly or indirectly, the resources. The OECD Due Diligence Guidance for Responsible Supply Chains of Minerals from Conflict-Affected and High-Risk Areas provides useful guidance in this regard;

- e. Businesses buying goods from Myanmar should apply rigorous standards of due diligence to their supply chains, to ensure that none of their products are coming from Tatmadaw-related businesses. Businesses should also make the origins of their products clear, to allow consumers to make informed choices.

189. To consumers:

- a. Those considering travelling to Myanmar should avoid dealing with MEHL, MEC and their subsidiaries and any other company owned or influenced by the Tatmadaw, using the list of companies in the Annexes to this report (and any updated information as it becomes available) to inform their consumer choices, given the Tatmadaw companies' involvement in the hotel and tourism industry;
- b. Refrain from purchasing jade or rubies produced, sold or exported by MEHL, MEC and their subsidiaries and any other company owned or influenced by the Tatmadaw or whose origin is unclear, given the high likelihood of them having originated in Kachin and Shan States in Myanmar, the involvement of Tatmadaw businesses in the jade and ruby mining, and the close association that the mining industry has with Myanmar's human rights crisis;
- c. Scrutinize goods originating from Myanmar, using the list of companies in the Annexes to this report (and any updated information as it becomes available) to inform consumer choices, and support non-Tatmadaw businesses in Myanmar by purchasing goods from businesses without links to the Tatmadaw.

190. To international financial institutions:

- a. Support and encourage investment only in the non-Tatmadaw linked private sector to support the growth of alternative economic actors to the Tatmadaw and associated businesses;
- b. Implement and deliver development projects in keeping with the human rights-based approach to programming, including participation, empowerment, local ownership, and sustainability;
- c. Support and deliver development, investment, and reconstruction in a fair, equitable, non-discriminatory, sustainable and non-politicized manner; for this reason, not undertake any economic or development activity, other than emergency humanitarian assistance, in Rakhine State until and unless all restrictions on the remaining Rohingya populations are lifted;
- d. Follow a human rights, community and protection approach when planning and implementing development projects, especially with regard to where and how development projects and programming are carried out or assistance provided. Projects or assistance must not provide economic or other benefit to parties where there is reason to suspect they were unlawfully involved in acts that constituted crimes under international law, including war crimes, crimes against humanity, or genocide;
- e. In development projects in Kachin, Shan and Rakhine States, do not support or engage in activities that destroy or contaminate crime sites or other evidence for the purposes of accountability;
- f. Ensure that any direct budget support to the Myanmar Government contributes to the fulfilment of the Sustainable Development Goals and the economic and social rights of the entire population in Myanmar in a non-discriminatory manner, to ensure that no one is left behind.

191. To the United Nations, including its funds, programmes and agencies:

- a. Do not provide assistance and programming that may prejudice the goals of accountability for international human rights law and international humanitarian law violations in relation to Myanmar;

- b. Place the specific needs of women and children at the forefront of UN humanitarian, development and reconstruction planning and implementation;
- c. Undertake further investigations into the following areas:
 - i. Companies owned by the Tatmadaw directly, as well as MEHL, MEC, their subsidiaries, and Myanmar Northern Star Company;
 - ii. MEHL, MEC and other Tatmadaw companies' past and present leadership;
 - iii. Tatmadaw-owned real estate projects;
 - iv. Companies owned by Tatmadaw leadership and the immediate family members of high-ranking officials, including Tatmadaw officers linked to crimes under international law in Rakhine, Kachin and Shan States;
 - v. Assets of identified perpetrators;
 - vi. Loans to and capital invested in Tatmadaw-owned companies and banks;
 - vii. Companies and States facilitating the sale and transfer of arms and related items to the Tatmadaw;
 - viii. commercial and/or financial links between the Tatmadaw and Buddhist nationalist organizations, including the Ma Ba Tha (Patriotic Association of Myanmar), in connection with Ma Ba Tha calls to action and mobilization around the "clearance operations" that began in August 2017 in northern Rakhine, incitement to, and other involvement in, anti-Rohingya violence, endorsement of Tatmadaw crimes; and
 - ix. The role of ethnic armed organizations and their business interests in Myanmar in relation to the contribution they made and continue to make to Myanmar's human rights crisis.

⁵⁶¹ On 17 August 2017, it was reported that "The Ministry of Defense has rejected a parliamentarian's request to relocate a sulfuric acid factory in Sagaing Region's Salingyi Township during the Lower House session on Wednesday. Lawmaker U Win Thein Zaw of Salingyi Township raised a question about the military-owned factory operated under Myanmar Economic Holdings Ltd (MEHL) near the village of Kan Kone in his constituency, citing locals' concerns over their health and the environmental impact of the factory. But Deputy Defense Minister Maj-Gen Myint Nwe defended the factory, saying that it does not harm locals, and that it serves the interests of the country. The factory provides sulfuric acid used in refining copper to the China-backed Letpadaung copper mines. The sulfuric acid factory is a joint venture between MEHL and China North Industries Corporation commonly known as Norinco, which is involved in a wide range of businesses including automobiles,
